Music and Philosophy.
One Cosmic Grain.
Henry Ford Chins Himself.
The Boy Led the Dog.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

GALLUP, N. M., Dec. 2—This is written high in the mountains of Northern Arizona, a long way from the great Pacific. You always regret leaving that big ocean, for it seems to say as you turn your back: "Why do you leave? I am the only REAL thing on the earth."

William Packer agrees with that. One of General Motors' managers, in charge of the Western Chevrolet zone, he drives 400 miles from the Hearst ranch, at San Simeon, to the Barstow railroad station at what he calls "a nice rolling gait," 60 miles an hour, mixing music with philosophy.

Says he, whirling around on one of those strange curves on the Pacific Coast that makes the sun seem to rise out in the ocean:

"Have you read where some highbrow says this earth is only a cosmic grain of sand in an infinite universe? That may be true, boy, but it's SOME grain of sand.

"Look at that ocean. It takes you four and a half days to get to Honolulu, and then you haven't even got a good start for Australia."

The old nursery rhyme, "Rings on her fingers, bells on her toes, and she shall have music wherever she goes," comes true in a modern automobile.

You are rolling along, offending no one, when suddenly a radio, concealed somewhere in the "Chevy," begins roaring, "Oh, you, lay, ee, oh."

Mr. Packer, as in a trance, says, "They are wonderful. On big trucks, drivers sometimes run 20 hours without rest. They have radios to keep them from going to sleep."

That unseen yodeler would make many drivers stay awake. There is other music, for Mr. Packer is the only man able to drive 60 miles an hour with one hand and play "Home Sweet Home" on the mouth organ with the other. This he does, while his stalwart friend on the back seat, Marsh Johnson, formerly of Buffalo, N. Y., now of Oakland, Cal., accompanies him lugubriously. Some times, both join in with the unseen radio singers.

Crossing the desert in old covered wagon days, with no radio or mouth organ, and no 60 miles an hour, one-hand driving must have been tame.

[illegible] you tire of soft sunshine, winter roses, camellias, gardenias, and January ladies in minute bathing suits, as this writer does some times, try genuine winter in the mountains of Northern Arizona. Grim, solemn pines that disdain to blossom cover every hill. Snow covers the ground, and the wind that blows over those hills blows away ten of your heavy years. Here it does not surprise you to see a man, 75 years old, lifting a log so heavy that an Easterner 30 years younger could do nothing about the log but look at it.

Mr. Harry Hartz, the 1927 A. A. A. champion, on this train, won the 500-mile automobile race at Indianapolis this year, winning for the third time and forever the silver cup more than seven feet high, containing $5000 worth of coin silver and costing $10,000 at Tiffany's. His Miller Hartz car was driven by Fred Fraeme.

Mr. Hartz talked more about Henry Ford than about his own car. He said:

"Mr. Ford was honorary referee of the race. His son, Edsel, who brought his two little boys with him, drove the car that set the pace, starting off the racers."

This writer, when honorary referee several years ago, learned what "setting the pace" is like, sitting next to Walter Chrysler in an open car. It flew around the track, glued to the slanting sides by centrifugal power, like a crazy fly racing around the inside of a saucer. Chrysler said:

"I'm going nice and easy, only 80, to get the boys started all together, evenly."

"The most interesting thing for the racing men," Mr. Hartz continued, "was the competition between Henry Ford and Harvey Firestone for the chinning championship. Henry Ford won easily, 3 to 0. He chinned himself three times. Firestone didn't even get all the way up. But that, he said, was because his product is supposed to cling to the ground. When he was referee several years ago, Henry Ford, without telling the boys about it, insured the lives of all the 30 racers for $10,000 each. None of them was killed, luckily. The boys all think a lot of Henry Ford, wherever you go."

Mr. Ford, temporarily laid up in Detroit, may like reading that.

At Winslow, near the border between Arizona and New Mexico, you drop letters for the Eastbound mail plane that will soon fly through. Friends in New York will see the letters two days before they see you. That is progress.

Back Bay Peeper Sought in Four New Breaks

Not satisfied to rest on his laurels after invading the house where Police Commissioner Hultman lives, the Back Bay "boudoir peeper" added to his repertoir as an annoyer early today and took to chucking pebbles at women's windows.

Three new breaks were added to the list as a result of his night's activities, despite capture of one suspect, but the new role was assumed on a roof in Bickerstaff st., when women in two apartments were awakened by the pebbles.

Mrs. Maud W. Runnals, living in a top floor apartment at 41 Bickerstaff st., reported that she was attracted to her window by pebbles striking the glass, and when she peered out a man on the roof of the next building waved and then vanished.

FAILS TO SEE FACE

A similar story was recited by Mrs. Eugene O'Hearn, occupant of the apartment beneath that of Mrs. Runnals, who said she had shot the beam of an electric flashlight toward the man on the roof, but could not get a look at his face.

The prowler's activities continued last night and early today, although the Back Bay district was heavily policed and the suspect was captured. He is James R. Foley, of Jefferson st., South End, who admits, according to police, that he is a bootlegger.

A powder puff was found on Foley, and his captors became even more puzzled when he explained that it was a puff he used at Deer Island, where, he was recently released after a six months' sentence for carrying a revolver.

Sergt. Maurice Sullivan and Special Officer Joseph Condon of Back Bay station said they found Foley acting suspiciously in the rear of a building in Charlesgate East. He was released, however, when no one identified him in a lineup at police headquarters.

The latest breaks were reported by Mrs. Catherine E. Russell of Marlborough st., Lorin D. Paine of 60 The Fenway, and a resident of 98 Hemenway st.

Mrs. Russell reported the prowler was scared away from her home by Miss Mary Lynch a maid, who found him forcing an entrance from the roof into the quarters of the servants.

The prowler had gained entrance to the Paine home when Paine awoke. He made quick exit through a window when Paine demanded to know who was in his room.

Phelan Death Note Laid to Gang Plot; Boy Held

Police saw a gangster plot plot today in the threatening note sent James J. Phelan, the banker, as 16-year-old Herbert Dudley Nutter, arrested at the Public Library on suspicion of sending the message, withstood two hours of grilling and handwriting tests at police headquarters.

The authorities discovered similarities between this note and one sent last September to E. B. Badger, engineer and fire extinguisher inventor, of Pitts st., West End.

The Badger note, kept secret until today by the police, demanded $5,000 under a threat of death. It was mailed from the north postal station, three blocks from Badger's place of business.

HELD FOR COURT.

The Nutter boy, a state ward living with a family on W. Canton st., South End, was taken to juvenile court despite his success against the police tests. A hearing was scheduled for tomorrow.

The boy fell into a trap laid by the police at the library, where a decoy package was left at a spot where the writer of the Phelan note asked to have $500 placed.

But today he insisted he was at the library to get a book and picked up the package out of curiosity.

"I didn't write that note and I didn't print it," the boy said.

His steadfast denials reopened the whole investigation and forced police officials to return to a theory that the $500 demand was no boyish prank but a real underworld plot.

CAUGHT IN LIBRARY

Although officials would not say so, it was learned that his handwriting and printing did not correspond with characteristics of the note the banker received. For half an hour the boy used pen and pencil while officers watched.

The note to Phelan read:

"Leave $500 in a package behind the Paris directory in the open shelf room of the Public Library, Dec. 1, before 10 p. m.

"P. S.—$500 is a pretty cheap price for a life."

Special Officers McGooch and Thayer, in plain clothes, left a bundle of clippings wrapped in plain paper at the designated spot and sat at a nearby table, pretending to read. Just before 10 o'clock they made the arrest.

THREATS OF TRADE WAR DEFIED

Congress Attitude Is Unchanged, Says Speaker Garner

The Debt Situation

By the Associated Press.

France has joined her plea to that of Great Britain for postponement of the debt installment due the United States on the 15th of this month.

Speaker Garner asserted Congress' attitude against any further delay in debt payments was unchanged, and Secretary of State Stimson said it might not be necessary even to reply to the latest notes from Europe.

Like Great Britain, France bases the request on the contention that compulsory payment not only will retard eventual economic recovery for the world, but also will undo the progress already made toward that objective.

There was no indication in Washington that the American stand for prompt payment would be altered.

Members of the House and Senate, both Republican and Democratic, expressed sentiment against deferment of the December payment.

Washington, Dec. 2—A flat prediction that Congress will not act to relieve America's war debtors was made today by Speaker Garner.

At about the same time Secretary Stimson at the White House newspapermen "it may not be ne sary to reply" to the latest from Great Britain and Franc ing suspension respectively o ments of $95,550,000 and $20,0 due in less than two weeks.

"Congress is not going to ch the situation," the Democr Vice-President-elect told rep ers.

"I said to Mr. Hoover wh was down at the White Hou week or so ago that the so the European nations realized United States expects to be the better off the whole world will be," Garner added.

U. S. POSITION CLEAR

"I still think that.

"They (the debtor nations) may continue to talk about it all they please, but Congress won't do anything about it. We have the right over here to do what we think best, just as they have."

Others powerful on Capitol Hill also expressed strong opposition to acceding to Great Britain and France.

The Secretary of State gave the first intimation that the United

CONGRESS MACHINE GETS IN MOTION FOR DRY REPEAL

GARNER RESOLUTION FAVORED BY JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Washington, Dec. 2 (INS)—The ponderous legislative machinery for repeal of the 18th Amendment creaked into action today.

For the first time since prohibition was enacted, the judiciary committee of the House assembled to consider various methods of repeal, with a majority sentiment apparently in favor of the straight-out repeal resolution of Speaker Garner.

Seventeen of the 22 members of the committee were present. One, Rep. Celler (D.), of New York, an outstanding wet, left a sick bed to attend.

"I couldn't stay away," he said.

Other members present were: Democrats—Sumners of Texas, chairman; Montagu of Virginia, McKeown of Oklahoma, Weaver of North Carolina, Browning of Tennessee, Oliver of New York, Gregory of Kentucky, Tarver of Georgia, Condon of Rhode Island and Dieterich of Illinois. Republicans—Dyer of Missouri, Yates of Illinois, Michener of Michigan, Kurtz of Pennsylvania, Moore of Ohio, La Guardia of New York, Bachmann of West Virginia, Sparks of Kansas. The absentees were Dominck of South Carolina, Christopherson of South Dakota and Hall of Illinois.

Michener, long a dry, announced he would endeavor to have the committee adopt the Glass resolution of the last session, which would provide instead of straight-out repeal a substitute for the 18th Amendment, specifically prohibiting the return of the saloon and giving the federal government power to prevent any of the states allowing saloons.

McKeown of Oklahoma, also dry, said he would push for another substitute which would give Congress the power to allow sale of liquor in any state that voted to permit it.

Senator Shipstead Backs Loan Ban

Washington, Dec. 2 (INS)—Prohibition on loans to foreign governments by American bankers until Europe arranges to pay in full the $11,000,000,000 war debt owed the United States is advocated by Sen. Shipstead (Fl.), of Minnesota.

William Randolph Hearst, in a statement Wednesday in the Hearst newspapers, urged Congress to pass a law "that no loans can be made to foreign governments until the war debts owed by those nations to the whole people of the United States shall have been paid."

Sen. Shipstead endorsed the proposed legislation. He said:

"European nations should not be permitted to unload their debts onto the American people.

"We should call a halt to loans to foreign governments until arrangements are made for payment of the war debts to us.

"We also provide that underwriters of loans should submit their proposals to a federal agency, probably the Federal Trade Commission, before bonds are floated in this country. The loans should be given the fullest publicity so the public would be warned of doubtful issues.

"Since 1920 the American public has been left holding the bag for the bankers and underwriters. The underwriting of $70,000,000,000 of domestic securities alone since 1920 has done much more harm, in my opinion, than the speculating operations on the stock exchange.

"We have refused to recognize Russia because she allegedly defaulted, but is willing to discuss a settlement and has submitted counter claims.

"The European debtors have no counter claims against us. We mus insist upon payment."

CONGRESS GIVES DEAF EAR TO DEBT PLEA

Leaders in Both Parties Say Obligations Must Be Paid

Washington, Dec. 2—Strong sentiment against further deferment of European war debts was expressed on Capitol Hill today as legislators read the lengthy British note of yesterday urging relief from this month's payments and President Hoover studied a similar communication just received from France.

Senators Smoot of Utah, Republican chairman, and Harrison of Mississippi, ranking Democrat on the Senate finance committee, were warmly critical of the British statement that increased tariffs and restrictions against American goods would be necessary if payments were resumed.

Others who read the British note inclined to the rather general belief that the United States would again deny the requests for leniency at this time.

It was also re-emphasized that President Hoover's proposal to create a new debt commission would be rejected.

Comment follows:

SENATOR WATSON of Indiana, Republican Leader — I don't think there is any chance for postponement, cancellation, reduction, revision or evasion of the December payments or that there is any chance for the revival of any war debts commission to consider the question.

SENATOR JOHNSON (R), of California — The second British note doesn't alter my opinion in the slightest. I persist in the conviction the war debts must be paid.

SENATOR McKELLAR (D), of Tennessee—My views of the foreign debts are exactly the same as before. The European governments should be told to pay and that is all there is to it.

HENRY T. RAINEY of Illinois, Democratic House Leader—Congress is not going to do anything on the foreign debts. There will be no reduction, postponement or cancellation by this Congress. We will stand pat. They can pay or default.

JAMES COLLIER (D) of Mississippi, chairman of House ways and means committee—My position is unchanged. I cannot conceive of any of the debtor nations failing to pay. I am against any action by Congress on these debts.

REPRESENTATIVE HAWLEY of Oregon, ranking Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee: So far as the British note is concerned, I am still of the opinion that all the nations ought to pay us on the day the payment is due.

REPRESENTATIVE McREYNOLDS (D., Tenn.): I see no reason for reduction or cancellation or a moratorium.

REPRESENTATIVE COCHRAN, of Missouri, chairman of the House Expenditures Committee: I am still in favor of collection by this country of the debts legitimately due us.

SPEAKER GARNER: I haven't read the note so there is nothing I can say about it.

REPRESENTATIVE McFADDEN, of Pennsylvania, ranking Republican on the House Banking Committee: There is nothing in the note that was not known heretofore. The note does not change the situation.

REPRESENTATIVE BANKHEAD, of Alabama, one of the House Democratic leaders: I am not in favor of a suspension of the December 15 payments.

FRENCH IN NEW NOTE PIN HOPE UPON HOOVER

Debt Plea Is "Normal Sequel" to 1931 Moratorium

Paris, Dec. 2 (AP)—The second French note requesting postponement of the war debt payment, due the United States in December, noted with satisfaction today that President Hoover was disposed to recommend to Congress a new examination of the debt question as a whole.

The French text of the note which had previously been sent to Washington was made public shortly after noon today and renewed the request for suspension of the $20,000,000 in interest.

In closing the document says that:

"The reception which will be given the request is awaited with confidence by the French government, which realizes all of the consequences which the decision of the President of the United States may have for improving or making worse the tragic situation resulting from the World War."

HOOVER'S PROPOSAL

As for the recommendation of the American President, which was contained in his original reply to the French request for postponement, the communication said that from the French viewpoint this implied the President believed such a study seemed necessary.

It was added that France realizes a reduction of Europe's debts to the United States would react on the American economic situation.

Since the modification of the French debt granted by the United States in 1926, the gravity of the economic and financial crisis has forced all interested governments to modify their positions with respect to the settlement of intergovernmental debts, and to adopt a series of concerted measures affecting reparations and debts both, says the note.

"The French government," it says, desires to emphasize that it never has thought of contesting the judicial validity of the various agreements which are the bas's of the war debts."

"NORMAL SEQUEL

The postponement now requested, says the memorandum, is the normal sequel to President Hoover's initiative in declaring the moratorium of 1931 and leaves intact the rights of both parties.

The note emphasizes that the American moratorium memorandum admitted the weight of the burden of inter-governmental debts in this period of crisis.

Referring to the Hoover-Laval communique issued at Washington last summer, the note recalls that that document stated a new arrangement concerning inter-governmental debts for the period of the depression might be necessary provided that the initiative came from the European powers chiefly interested.

Europe, the note says, did its part and granted Germany a reduction of 90 per cent in a three-year moratorium on reparations.

The agreement reached at Lausanne was, in the mind of Europe, to be part of a general rearrangement of governmental payments, the French Government wrote.

"It would be grave indeed," says the note, "if the agreement obtained with such difficulty at Lausanne should have to be reconsidered.

"Would it not be equitable if, in the same spirit of international solidarity and in consolidating the results already achieved, the American Government would accept in its turn postponement of the December interest?"

GAVE UP $85,000,000

The note says that despite a budgetary deficit of nearly half a billion dollars, France voluntarily abandoned an annual income from reparations of approximately $85,000,000.

Discussing the recent flow of gold toward France, the note says:

"This gold does not belong to the French treasury. It is not a source of permanent wealth for France. It is a guarantee of all deposits made by Frenchmen or foreigners in France. Its normal and desirable redistribution can come only after there is a general return of confidence."

France has no intention of abandoning the role circumstances permit her to play in the restoration of economic stability, the note says, but she asks with some apprehension how she can continue her efforts if the collaboration of the United States, on which she has been counting, fails to materialize.

Public Got Note Before Stimson

Washington, Dec. 2 (INS)—The French note, asking postponement and further revision downward of the French obligation to the U. S. Treasury was released for publication in Paris before Secretary of State Stimson had a chance to peruse it.

The note was delivered to Stimson at his home last night during a dinner the Secretary of State was giving to a group of diplomats. It was published in Paris before Stimson had it translated.

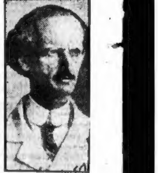
Prof. Piccard to Seek U. S. Support

Paris, Dec. 2—To make the United States "magnetic-pole conscious" will be the chief mission of Prof. August Piccard's trip to America next year. He is preparing to sail January 4, to get financial backing and two scientists willing to make a balloon ascent from Hudson Bay to study the antics of cosmic rays in the magnetic pole region.



Prof. Piccard

The man who twice penetrated the rarified atmosphere regions 10 miles above earth, won't make the Hudson Bay ascent himself.

Journal, widely circulated, comes aboard and tells the news.

The Rodeo Association of America announces that Donald Nesbitt, of Quemado, New Mexico, is the world's champion cowboy. He won 3450 points in competition this year, and must be more "fearfully and wonderfully made" than usual.

Riding bucking horses is hard on a man's international arrangements.

A gold mine has been found near Mount Ararat, at Kagizman, and Turkey, which owns that territory, expects to take out three hundred million dollars in gold. That will interest many Americans that haven't thought about Mount Ararat since Sunday school days, when they believed the Ark landed on a sharp mountain peak, all the animals being lowered by rope.

This would interest angels.

Chicago has a "conveniences" shop, operated for charity, prepared to do almost anything. A lady telephoned for a boy to exercise her dog on a rainy night, and the boy who came, eager to earn a little money, was so small, so young, that the owner of the dog felt bound to walk with him, lest he be run over. She walked both boy and dog. This is an interesting civilization. If you hired a pup to walk a boy on a rainy night, the "cruelty society" would lock you up.

U. S. S[redacted]IES BRITISH DEBT THREAT

Continued fro

States might not new debt communicati rried back to the State after a cabinet meeting war debt situation—ar re- ceived French no ar- were discussed.

"It may not be re- ply," he told ne as he left the White

While he did n the statement was unc mean the government tion has been clearly stated in its replies to the original requests and that the latest communications present no new proposals requiring answer.

HOOVER'S FI[redacted]

In answerin and French no from other Hoover stated been advanced to justify suspending the Dec. 15 payments.

He added that he would recommend to Congress the formation of an agency to go over the whole situation with the debtor nations.

Great Britain's note discussed by [redacted] blank for cancellation, but reiterated the British position that war debts and reparations were blocking world economic recovery. It was thus made evident the revision Britain seeks is tantamount to cancellation.

VEILED WARNING

Insistence upon payment, the note said, would necessitate measures by Britain to offset its adverse balance of trade, which only could be done by further barriers on British importation of American goods.

The note stated:

"To the extent therefore that payments were resumed to the United States treasury a definite and unfavorable reaction must follow to the United States producer."

The note emphasized that the Lausanne agreement scaling down German reparations to about ten cents on the dollar "could not be ratified" without readjustment of the debts. That statement bore out the so-called "gentlemen's agreement" predicating leniency to Germany on debt reduction by the United States.

REJECTED BY LEADERS

Great Britain did not say it could not or would not pay, but emphasized that financial and economic injury would result if payment was insisted upon.

The British said they are staggering under a tremendous burden and that if they have to pay in gold it would rock the foundation of the British fiscal system. They also reiterated the contention that reparations and war debts are interwoven.

The note declared the Lausanne settlement was arragned with the "cognizance and approval of the United States" and that if payments have to be made the creditor nations will obviously have to collect from Germany.

The note drew a distinction between commercial obligations and intergovernmental debts. Commercial issues, it said, are normally self-liquidating. The war debts represent destruction, it declared, and "like the shells on which they were largely spent these loans were blown to pieces."

BURDEN ON TAXPAYERS

Replying to the American objection to postponement on the ground it would merely transfer the burden to the American taxpayer, the note said:

"His majesty's government are aware that any remission of the war debts may be criticized as transferring the liability from the taxpayer in the borrowing country to the taxpayer in the lending country, and in this respect the taxpayers in the United Kingdom and the United States are in much the same position.

"It will be seen therefore that the policy which his majesty's government has consistently advocated is one which, if it involves sacrifices on the part of American taxpayers, has involved similar sacrifices on the part of their own taxpayers.

"Even a partial recovery of business activity in creditor countries as a result of the removal of these abnormal conditions would result in additional receipts from tax on the existing scale and would compensate the exchequers of the creditor countries many times over for the loss of revenue involved in revision of the war debt settlements."

$5,000,000 AN HOUR

The note continued that the losses to the British and American public could not be measured "in the same scales as the untold loss of wealth and human misery caused by the present economic crisis," adding that the loss in international trade is costing $5,000,000 every hour.

London Officials Deplore Threat of Reprisals

London, Dec. 2 (INS)—Deep anxiety over the reception accorded at Washington to Britain's second plea for suspension of the December war debt payment was expressed by officials here today.

Newspapers again emphasized that Britain will pay in December if the United States insists, but the Daily Express raised its voice, lamenting the note did not declare flatly that Britain cannot pay.

Some officials expressed doubt of the wisdom of Britain's holding out a tariff reprisal threat in connection with the war debt payment, stating they did not believe these tactics were necessary in presenting the case for revision of the debt settlement. They expressed fear this threat would merely antagonize the United States.

Revolt Plan Denied

Madrid, Dec. 2 (AP)—Minister of Interior Santiago Casares Quiroga said today there was no foundation for reports of an imminent extremist movement.

DOCTOR WHO KILLED WIFE IN MERCY ACT GETS 15 YEARS

SENTENCED ON OWN PLEA OF GUILTY

Woman Slain to Save Her From Starving, It Was Claimed

Dr. Towneley Thorndike French, 57, Harvard Medical school graduate, who shot and killed his wife to save her from the hardships of destitution, pleaded guilty to manslaughter today.

He was sentenced to State Prison for 15 to 20 years by Judge Joseph Walsh in Suffolk Superior Court.

As the gray-haired man stood in the prisoner's dock, Asst. Dist. Atty. Daniel J. Gillen recounted the strange story of the "mercy slayer."

Dr. French had been indicted for second degree murder and when he pleaded guilty to the lesser charge, Gillen recommended the maximum sentence of 20 years.

"This man had been receiving aid from a medical society, but that aid was stopped," said Gillen. "His wife had been working in a store, but she was discharged.

"On Labor Day he shot and killed her. The next day he walked into Lagrange st. police station and told the desk officer that a woman was dead in a house over on Melrose st.

"They questioned him and he told of shooting and killing his wife the previous day. He led them to the room, where his wife was dead in bed, and told them it was an act of mercy."

After shooting his wife, Dr. French had sat for hours by the bed, trying to decide what to do, and at last deciding that, as he had accomplished his purpose of relieving her misery, he would give himself up and accept punishment.

Trustee Named in McKnight Bankruptcy

Fred D. Nichols, Boston attorney, today was appointed trustee in bankruptcy for Edwin T. McKnight, president of the closed Medford Trust Co., in Medford.

The appointment was made by B. Loring Young, referee in bankruptcy, who is presiding over the bankruptcy court hearings in Cambridge.

When the McKnight matter was brought up today, former Dist.-Atty. Robert T. Bushnell, counsel for Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy and depositors in banks in which McKnight was interested, filed an appearance indicating that McKnight will face a long grilling by Bushnell when his bankruptcy petition is heard.

HERBERT DUDLEY NUTTER — INSPECTOR THOS. MULREY

Herbert Dudley Nutter shown as he wrote notes for hours at police headquarters today to prove he was not the author of the $500 demand sent to James J. Phelan, the banker, on threat of death. He was arrested at the Public Library after he had taken a decoy package police had deposited at the designated place. He explained he was merely in quest of a book and picked up the packet in idle curiosity. Police believe now a gang sent the note. (Staff photo.)

100 FLEE BLAST IN NEWTON

Nearly a hundred persons fled Newton District Court in panic today when an explosion in the basement shook the entire building.

Sergt. Bartlett Cullen, who was in a garage nearby, rushed into the building where it was believed a bomb had exploded. Running down to the basement he found Fritz W. Andersen, a janitor, crawling along the floor. The entire basement was filled with gas and smoke. Cullen seized Andersen and carried him to the street.

Andersen was treated for burns and cuts about the head.

The explosion was caused when Andersen attempted to light a heater. It is believed that the fumes which filled the firebox of the boiler, exploded when Andersen applied a match.

Four men, overcome after drinking bad liquor, were expected to recover at Haymarket Relief station today. They gave their names as George Quinn, J. C. Flynn, John McCarthy and William Penney.

TIME TO HELP SANTA, TOO

For the title of the nation's busiest woman, we nominate Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, next first lady of the land. She finds time not only to help her husband, but also to edit magazines, teach school and be a mother to all her family. And now she's found another job—helping Santa Claus. Here she is in New York doing her gift shopping early. Wonder what lucky child will get that clown? (International News Photos.)

Einstein Defends His Stand on Pacifism

Copyright, 1932, by International News Service

Potsdam, Germany, Dec. 2 (INS)—For the space of a few minutes today, Prof. Albert Einstein put down his paper and pencil, deferred consideration of theories far beyond the scope of common mortals, and "proudly defended" his cherished cause of pacifism.

It was in answer to the charges made against him by the Women's Patriot Organization in Washington, which demanded his exclusion from the United States on the grounds that his defense of pacifistic aims and ideals entailed allegiance to the doctrine of Communism.

The wizard of relativity did not want to talk. He has been in retirement for weeks in his isolated frame cottage overlooking the River Havel.

But "Mama" Einstein thought the attack called for an answer. Seated at a table in his study, the renowned physicist told what he thought about war.

"I belong to no political party," he said, thus disposing of the charge of Communism made ainst him.

"Publicly, I am a scientist. But as a private citizen I claim the right to feel and believe and fight for the interests of culture and of justice.

"I have always considered it my duty to intervene when justice is at stake, even though I am bitterly attacked for it.

"I feel honored because I have always had a certain kind of enemies.

"I have always fought war—an attitude which the majority of sound political opinion in the United States appreciates.

"Proudly I rise to defend so-called 'war resisters' whom I regard as greater heroes than those who allow themselves to be sacrificed upon the altar of misconceived patriotism."

Prof. Einstein said he regarded it as his "duty" to go on record with this strong defense of patriotism. It was this feeling of duty, he declared, which prompted him to talk to a newspaper correspondent "for the first time in weeks and weeks."

A request to the State Department at Washington to bar Prof. Albert Einstein as a Communist was made recently by Mrs. Randolph Frothingham of Sargent Crossway, Brookline, as president of the Woman's Patriotic Corporation. She charged the famous scientist with being associated with organizations militantly opposed to the fundamental principle of organized government, the function of securing obedience to law by force.

Divorce Won by Mrs. Helen Hammond

Mrs. Helen Hammond of Nyack, N. Y., and Boston, in Probate Court today won a divorce from Dwight G. Hammond, marine engineer, of Dorchester and Hull.

In May, 1930, Hammond was denied a divorce in Superior Court, Brockton, where he charged his wife had deserted him three days after their marriage in Nyack in May, 1918. Mrs. Hammond fought the suit, testifying she had pursued him all over the country to get him to settle down.

Today, in her own suit charging desertion, Mrs. Hammond testified her husband deserted her on April 15, 1922.

The uncontested divorce was granted after Judge Joseph R. McCoole had been informed Hammond had agreed to a flat settlement of $2100 on his wife in lieu of alimony.

Mercury Due for Drop by Sunday

Bostonians enjoyed summer-like weather today, the mercury rising to 62 at 1:30 p. m., thus breaking the record for the date by one degree. The highest previous temperature for the date was 61 in 1901.

The highest temperature for any December day was 69 in 1912. Today's temperature was 20 degrees above normal, and this was due to a very low pressure in Canada on the north, and a high pressure to the south of Boston.

Don't put the heavy "benny" away in mothballs, however, as wintry winds are on the way from the Canadian northwest. They will reach Boston tomorrow night. It was 10 below zero in Alberta, Sask., early today—and that's where those chill breezes are coming from.

Liberty Restored

Havana, Dec. 2 (AP)—Suspended constitutional guarantees of personal liberties were restored yesterday in five of Cuba's six provinces by presidential decree. Only Havana was omitted.

Finds Missing Boy Safe Right in Jail

Worried over the disappearance of his son, Gordon, 17, missing om home since Wednesday, James Louisberg of Franklin ave., appealed to police today.

He was informed that his son and a chum are in the safe keeping of the law. Both are working out a $2 fine at the rate of 50 cents a day in the House of Correction for violating a city ordinance.

So a Coast Guard Cutter Was Sent to Headquarters

Well, everybody has their troubles but it certainly was a shock today to see a flag signal of distress flying from in front of police headquarters at Berkeley and Stuart sts.

There were some who thought the signal of distress might denote that help was wanted in trapping the Back Bay's elusive "boudoir peeper," while those of another school of thought figured it might be that the policemen were trying to call a cop.

The Stars and Stripes are hung out daily in front of headquarters about 8 a. m., but when the flag was run out today it caught on the pole and there was no wind to free it. About three hours later a wind sprang up, fluttered out the folds to let the flag hang—and it hung there for some time before discovery was made that the field of stars was at the bottom instead of the top.

In any man's navy that's a signal of distress and there was a great hurrying and scurrying about in the white building until the error was corrected.

HOOVER'S AID SHUTS SOCIETY WOMEN OUT

Plea for the Hunger Marchers Rejected at the Door

Washington, Dec. 2 (INS)—President Hoover's door was closed today to a group of women—three of whom are from the most socially prominent families in America—who attempted to intercede for the "hunger" marchers now converging on Washington.

Secretary to the President, Theodore G. Joslin, bluntly refused to permit Mrs. William B. Osgood Field, Jr., of New York; Mrs. Corliss Lamont, of New York; Mrs. Polly Boyden, of Chicago, and their companions, to present the President a petition demanding the "hunger" marchers be received and be given "the constitutional right to petition."

The women reached the White House executive offices shortly before 1 o'clock and were ushered into Joslin's office.

"We have a petition—" Mrs. Field began.

"I will receive it," said Joslin.

"May we see the President?" Mrs. Field asked.

"I'm afraid that will not be possible."

"Who made this decision?"

"I did."

"Is this the usual procedure for receiving petitions?" Mrs. Field persisted.

"Every case is judged on its own merits," the secretary replied.

"Who judges the merits?"

"I do."

RECALLS BONUS ARMY

The delegation, calmly indignant, left the White House with the petition still in their possession. Joslin suggested to them that they see the District of Columbia commissioners "because it is purely a local matter."

"It was not a 'purely local matter' last July when federal troops routed the bonus marchers with bayonets and tear gas," Mrs. Freid observed.

"We are not interested in the responsibilities of the local government. We are interested in the situation insofar as the federal Government is responsible."

1000 Hunger Marchers Due in Capital Tonight

Pittsburgh, Dec. 2 (INS)—Dawn today found a motley caravan of nearly 1000 self-styled hunger marchers "on the road" again, leaving Pittsburgh in dilapidated trucks and automobiles on the last leg of their trek to Washington. They hoped to reach the capital tonight.

FAIR DANCER AT SEA WITHOUT CLOTHES

DON ALVARADO — MARILYN MILLER

"At sea without clothes!" So radioed Marilyn Miller, petite revue dancer, from the liner Bremen to friends in New York. It wasn't quite as bad as all that. But Miss Miller did find herself in the role of a stowaway. When she went down to the ship to bid bon voyage to Mrs. Alan Dawn, she and half a dozen others failed to hear the cry of "All ashore!" Among those carried out to sea is Don Alfredo Alvarado, fiance of Miss Miller—according to Broadway gossip column writers. He is shown with her at a recent party. (Int. News Photos.)

TEX RICKARD'S WIDOW WED

New York, Dec. 2 (AP)—The marriage more than a year ago of the former Maxine Elliott Rickard, widow of Tex Rickard, fight promoter, to Frank Dailey, business man, was learned today. Officials of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, where the wedding took place, declined to give any details of the ceremony.

La Barrymore Is in Hiding for Rest

New Haven Ct., Dec. 2 (AP)—Ethel Barrymore, the actress, who cancelled her immediate theatrical engagements because of a severe cold, checked out of her hotel this afternoon and left in an automobile for an unannounced destination.

Dr. Harry Welch one of her physicians, said he believed she was going to New York to rest.

Jacchia's Ashes at Tomb of Brother

Rome, Dec. 2 (AP)—An urn containing the ashes of Agide Jacchia, 57-year-old director of the Boston Conservatory of Music who died in Siena Nov. 29, today was brought here by his widow and her daughter, Elsa.

With a few friends they took the ashes to the Monumental cemetery where the urn was placed beside the burial plot of Jacchia's brother.

Hit-Run Driver Goes on Trial in Railroad Station

Boscawen, N. H., Dec. 2—In the Boston & Maine Railroad depot, the only building of public use in the town, an alleged hit-and-run death driver was arraigned today with most of the town crowded into the station to listen.

Daniel Griffin, 40, garage owner of Boscawen, was struck by an automobile last night in the town, and died less than an hour before Mason B. Lufkin, 35, of Twin Mountain, was arraigned.

The death caused a more serious charge to be made against Lufkin, who is alleged to have fled after hitting Griffin, but who was caught after a chase by Chief of Police William Hurd, who witnessed the accident.

Lufkin was charged with leaving the scene of an accident and with reckless driving resulting in the death of a human being. He was bound over for the April term of Superior court at Concord, but meanwhile the case will be presented to the grand jury.

Dembrowski Asks Name of Denby

Dominic Bernard Dembrowski would like to be Daniel Bernard Denby, if the Salem Probate Court doesn't mind.

He is so determined about changing his name, that he has filed a petition to that effect in the Registry of Probate at Salem, in which he states that he is 33, a carpenter

Hotel Man Dies

Charleston, S. C., Dec. 2 (AP)—J. W. Ivey, 56, hotel proprietor here is dead. He is survived by a son, Clarence G. Ivey, of Boston.

G. O. P. BOLTERS TO KEEP PLUMS

Warm Springs, Ga., Dec. 2 (INS)—Progressive Republicans who supported Franklin D. Roosevelt for the presidency will share in federal patronage, which will be at his disposal after March 4, it was learned today from sources close to the President-elect.

When it comes time to hand out political plums recommendations of Senators Johnson of California, Norris of Nebraska, Cutting of New Mexico and La Follette of Wisconsin, will be given careful consideration. In addition the President-elect intends to look to these men for advice on other matters, it was indicated by his advisers.

6 Bureaus Abolished in Big State Pay Slash

cars for other than official use.

Abolishment of wages paid State Prison inmates.

Doing away with the so-called "Metropolitan Parks expense fund" so all money received from concessions shall be subject to the same conditions as other departmental receipts for budget control.

Purchase of supplies for military purposes to be made hereafter by the State purchasing agency, except in time of war or other emergency.

SALARY REDUCTIONS

The proposed salary reductions are:

All receiving up to $5250 by statute would be reduced 6 per cent and those above 8 per cent. Reductions in classified list would be on the step rate basis. These employes would be cut the amount they were receiving when they got their last pay increase.

The reduction recommended for members of the Legislature is 10 per cent of the present $2000 salary.

Four of the 11 members of the committee opposed the salary cut proposals. Rep. John V. Mahoney of Boston, vice-chairman, was against any reduction. Rep. George P. Anderson of Boston objected to decreases for those receiving under $2,000. Rep. William B. Baker of Newton asserted the reductions were not heavy enough and favors 25 per cent off for members of the Legislature and 9 to 12 per cent for the others.

Rep. James R. O'Dea of Northampton reserved his rights and opposed abolishment of the industrial commission.

Rep. Mahoney dissented from the recommendations for transfer of the motor vehicle registry and abolishing the divisions of parks and necessaries of life.

Rep. Archibald Estabrook of Haverhill was against the plan to have military supplies purchased centrally and opposed the idea of abolishing the industrial and development commission.

Senator James E. Warren of Lawrence signed the report but said he would submit a minority report.

Those who signed without reservation are Senators Samuel Wragg of Needham, chairman, and Charles A. Stevens of Lowell, Reps. Frank O. Scott of West Springfield, L. Blaine Libbey of Milford and John P. Lyons of Brockton.

MOTOR REGISTRY TRANSFER.

In explaining its recommendation to transfer the motor vehicle registry the report said the work is so closely allied with that of the uniformed State police a consolidation would eliminate waste effort.

The proposal for abolishing the division of parks is based, the report said, is because it has no duties and because the present is not a time to embark upon an expensive program for park development. Daniel McGrath has headed this commission since its establishment last April.

A saving of $200,000 is expected to be made by eliminating reimbursements for luncheons for employes.

The recommendation for abolishing pay to state prison inmates is based partly on the opinion of the state auditor that if the practice is to be continued it should be extended to Concord Reformatory.

The committee stresses the necessity for curtailment of borrowing by municipalities, saying:

"The ease with which it has been possible in the past to borrow for special projects, financed by long-term bond issues, has blinded the people to the calamity of inevitable settlement now being forced upon them in the form of assessments too heavy for many to bear."

The committee says a city that refuses to curtail appropriations for next year by the measure of revenue it may expect to collect will find itself in a precarious position a year hence.

ADVISED BY TIERNEY

Civil Service Commissioner Paul E. Tierney was quoted as having advised the committee there is no reason why municipal officials cannot discharge Civil Service employes, abolish their positions or reduce their compensation, provided it is done in "good faith and in a just cause" and by giving proper notice. Lack of funds was cited as a "just cause."

An opinion from Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long was cited, estimating that only $12,000,000 would accrue in 1933 from the individual income tax, a deficit of $20,000,000 from 1930. This revenue goes to cities and towns.

It was also cited that the cost of public welfare in Massachusetts cities has jumped from $5,000,000 in 1930 to $30,000,000 in 1932, with a big increase also in the amounts appropriated by the towns, the principal burden falling upon real estate owners in the face of but a fraction of earnings on property compared with two years ago.

STATE ROAD FUND

Of the proposal to distribute the highway fun to cities and towns, the commission said state roads are now in excellent condition and no great injury will come if for a temporary period no new ones are built. It is pointed out that motorists are now using city and town roads from funds supplied from other sources of taxation.

In connection with its recommendation for salary cuts, the committee said:

"It is inconceivable that the compensation of public employes be maintained without regard for the declining values of all other commodities."

VON SCHLEICHER CHANCELLOR

Berlin, Dec. 2 (INS)—Gen. Kurt Von Schleicher, Germany's "iron man," today was appointed Chancellor of the Reich by President Von Hindenburg.

Von Schleicher accepted the appointment.

Announcement that the former minister of war was to assume control of a German cabinet was made by a high foreign office official. The announcement was later confirmed by an official government statement.

HURLEY IN NEW PLEA TO FORT

State Treasurer Hurley today sent another letter to Franklin W. Fort, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank board, urging haste in order to relieve an ever-widening circle of applicants.

"The policy now in effect of directing prospective borrowers to private loan agencies appears wholly inadequate at a time when those agencies are refusing loans of every variety in their desire to remain liquid, as pointed out by the chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation."

After reminding Chairman Fort that his letter of Nov. 19 had not been acknowledged, Treasurer Hurley added:

"It does not appear that the Home Loan Bank Board should in the words of a local newspaper editorial, 'become timid all at once,' in its 'unwillingness to use its huge funds' when the hardships of the home owners' group is so pressing."

NO MORE BACKACHES

LIKE so many other women—perhaps like yourself—Mrs. Burroughs used to suffer with severe backaches every month. Then she tried Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Shortly afterwards she wrote to us, "I believe it to be the best medicine I ever used. I sleep well, my nerves are better, my appetite is improved and I am getting stronger all the time."

Magic [illegible]ber Clicks in Pool

"7-11."

The magic sy[illegible]k and chance reached [illegible] pockets of pool opera[illegible] today.

For such a com[illegible] held by thousands, [illegible] pay the pool that police [illegible] vainly to stamp out. The [illegible] appeared last night and [illegible]25 for every 5-cent piec[illegible] on it.

Because of the large number who picked it for its reputed luck and the heavy odds of 500 to 1, its appearance meant a gigantic loss to operators of big pools.

Rumors about the city that the big operators might not pay, brought statements from most of them that no effort would be made to "duck" the loss.

Battle Looms in Stearns Divorce

Indications that Mrs. Lila D. Stearns, of Marblehead, would contest the divorce suit, filed early this week by her husband, Atty. Ralph W. Stearns, former assistant attorney-general was seen in her filing of an appearance at the Salem Registry of Probate.

Atty. Stearns charges his wife deserted him on their seventh wedding anniversary, June 1, 1929.

Federal Jurist Upholds U. S. Tax

Legal authorities today stressed the importance of the decision of U. S. Judge Elisha H. Brewster regarding the constitutionality of the revenue act of 1924 for federal estate tax on real estate.

The decision was made in the case of Samuel Gottlieb, of Boston, executor and trustee of the will of William McQuillen, of Brewster, who sought a tax refund of $21,667 paid by the estate to the collector of internal revenue. The plaintiff claimed real estate in Missouri was not subject to federal estate tax and that land in Massachusetts and other states should be likewise free.

Judge Brewster in his decision agreed with the argument that Congress undoubtedly intended to include interests in real estate in the gross estate but said he could not agree the act should be declared unconstitutional because it failed to accomplish its purpose.

Women Plan to Aid Jobless Campaign

A bill, based on the plan now being used in Wisconsin for unemployment relief, to be introduced in the Legislature, was explained to a "study group" of women who met in the home of Mrs. Arthur A. Shurcliff, 66 Mt. Vernon st., by Mrs. Marion A. Cheek. About 15 women were present at the meeting held to discuss jobless relief, under the auspices of the Boston League of Women Voters.

PAPER PROFITS ON BOOKS OF INSULL FIRMS

By M. L. RAMSAY

Chicago, Dec. 2 (INS)—In the vast array of "paper profits" which bedecked the books of Insull Utility Investments, Inc., were several dividends declared by two of its subsidiaries, Public Service Trust and Second Utilities Syndicate.

The declared dividends, the receivers' audits revealed today, were not paid. Neither of the subsidiaries "realized enough funds from its operations" to pay them. Yet Insull Utilities, according to the auditors, recorded these dividends as though they had been collected tucked away in its treasury.

For a much greater portion of its income, Insull Utilities was dependent upon dividend payments by Middle West Utilities Company, Insull's three big independent operating companies, and four other Insull concerns.

STOCK PROVED COSTLY

Five of these, including Middle West, paid dividends in stock rather than cash. Commonwealth Edison and the other independents paid $8 a year in cash. But Insull Utilities had paid for their stock prices so high that its return on its investment was less than 3 per cent.

In Corporation Securities far more cash was paid out in dividends and interest charges than was received in the same way. The company paid a dividend, however, as late as Nov. 2, 1931. Seven weeks later, on Dec. 22, and at all times thereafter, it was insolvent, in the opinion of the receivers.

ABOVE EARNINGS

Regarding dividends paid by the Mississippi Valley Utilities Investment Company, the auditors reported:

> "On any conservative or well recognized basis of accounting, the dividends paid have been very considerably in excess of the company's earnings. It will be noted that it was necessary for the Middle West Utilities Company to advance funds in order for the company to pay the above dividends."

The dividends in question amounted to $8,000,000, and in large part were paid right back to Middle West, which owned the Mississippi Company.

Vermont Soldiers Plan Yule Party

Burlington, Vt. Dec. 2 (AP)—The soldiers at Fort Ethan Allen, probably far removed from their own homes, intend to do something for others this Christmas.

Their commanding officer, Col. J. F. Barnes, announced the soldiers would provide 120 dinners for as many children at the post on Christmas day.

93 Apply for Work at Women's Bureau

Only 93 new applicants were registered at the free emergency employment bureau of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union during November, 1932, while in November, 1931, there were 373 new registrations.

This marked decrease in applicants and the fact that 69 women have been given work during the past month make Miss Gertrude L. Fletcher, head of the bureau, confident that business conditions are steadily improving.

WHISPERED Great Complexion Secret!

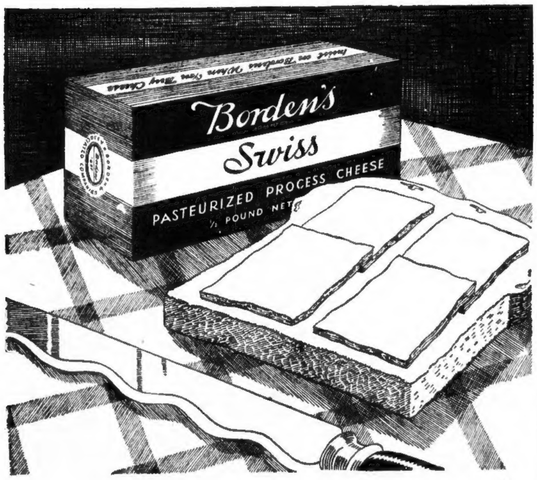
Travel to the Alps themselves . . .

YOU WON'T FIND THE EQUAL OF BORDEN'S SWISS CHEESE



UNTIL recently, the best Swiss Cheese could be had only in certain Alpine valleys. But our Wisconsin cheese-makers—men who inherited their art from their Swiss ancestors—have matched the finest efforts of Alpine cheese-makers. In fact, in a test in which hundreds of people tasted both Borden's and imported Swiss without knowing which was which, a huge majority chose Borden's. Yet Borden's costs much less.

Just try a package—taste the superior flavor of this cheese. It's a flavor so nut-sweet, so creamy-mellow, that the most sullen appetite perks up and smiles. On rye bread, on crackers, or just "plain"—this cheese is an honest-to-goodness appetite thrill!

Borden's Swiss comes in a convenient, foil-lined package. It's fresh when you get it—and it stays that way. No rind—no waste.

Be sure to try these other Borden Cheeses, too

All these cheeses are made by the same company that has been known for fine dairy products for 75 years. Try each one—try them all!

COLBY TO SPEAK HERE ON DEBTS TOMORROW

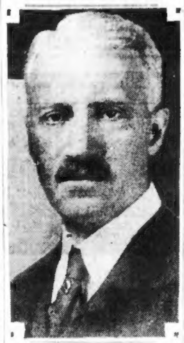
Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State in the Wilson cabinet and special editorial writer for the Hearts newspapers, will be the chief speaker at a dinner of the Clover Club in the Exchange Club tomorrow evening.

The subject of Mr. Colby's address will be the war debts owed to the United States. Because of his close association with President Wilson, the 200 or more persons who are planning to attend the dinner are on the qui vive of expectancy.

Carl Dreyfus, publisher of the Boston Evening American, will entertain Mr. Colby and a group of representative men at luncheon in the Parker House tomorrow noon.

Among those who will attend the luncheon are Prof. Francis B. Sayre of Harvard Law School, Henry L. Shattuck, treasurer of Harvard University; Frank L. Simpson, professor of law, Boston University; former Mayor Andrew J. Peters, L. E. Kirstein, P. A. O'Connell, William Phillips, former Canadian ambassador; former Gov. Alvan T. Fuller, Felix Vorenberg, Adolph Ehrlich, Atty. LaRue Brown and Mayor Curley.

In Debt Address



Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State in the Wilson cabinet, who will be the chief speaker at the Clover Club dinner here tomorrow night. He will discuss the war debts. At noon he will be the guest of honor at luncheon to be given by Carl Dreyfus.

BIG SALE AT GILCHRIST'S

Gift roads tomorrow will lead to Gilchrist Company, where Red Letter Day is to be celebrated by what the company declares will be the most dynamic merchandising event ever staged by this progressive house in December. Preparations for this great sale included trips to the markets by all their buyers in 160 departments.

In a statement Felix Vorenberg, president of the company, pointed out that Gilchrist's tremendous purchasing power as a member of the American Retailers, Inc., a group of 28 other stores in 28 cities, with a sales volume of considerably over $100,000,000, "worked miracles in the markets." The one-day sale in New England originated at Gilchrist Company in 1918. So far as is known, the record for the largest single day's business in New England is held by Gilchrist's with sales of $598,934.

Nearly a thousand people will be able to say, "I've got a job!" for it is reported that Gilchrist's have engaged a thousand extra salespeople for this great event so as to provide continuous service from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. without requiring extra hours from any of their saleswomen.

Woman Hires Hotel Room to End Life

North Adams, Dec. 2 (AP)—Mrs. Dorothy Drew Ball, 38, wife of Edward I. Ball of Adams, committed suicide yesterday, police said, by shooting herself through the head in a hotel. Although Mrs. Ball had been separated from her husband for the past few years, no motive was apparent.

MOTHER IS HURT HELPING TOTS ESCAPE FIRE

A woman was so badly burned that she may die; another woman, 95 years old and a cripple, was rescued over ladders by Boston Evening American employes, and 50 persons were driven from their homes today in fires in Dorchester, the West End and Cambridge.

Mrs. Lucy Archilles was preparing breakfast for herself and four children over an oil stove in her Ashmont st., Dorchester, home when an explosion showered her with flaming oil.

Flames which ignited the kitchen cut off escape through the door. Despite her own condition, the mother directed 11-year-old Lucy Archilles to drop her three brothers, Robert, 9; Philip, 6, and David, 5, out the first floor window and jump out herself.

Meanwhile, a brother-in-law, Harry Archilles, rushed into the kitchen and beat out the flames in the mother's clothing. She was given first aid treatment by firemen and then was removed to City Hospital where her name was placed on the danger list.

In the West End, James Lomasney and Hyman Lipman, Boston Evening American delivery truck drivers, discovered a fire in a six-story building in Chambers st. just as Patrolman Albert Perkins came along.

Smoke was rolling up through the hallways and the men were told that a 95-year-old woman invalid Mary Hardy, was on the sixth floor. Up the six floors the three men ran and found her trapped in her room by the smoke.

They were about to carry her down over the stairs when a ladder truck arrived and a ladder was raised, allowing the three rescuers to carry her down on the outside of the building.

This fire was caused by hot ashes in a barrel in the basement and resulted in damage of $500.

A firebug is blamed by police for a fire in a Howard st., Cambridge, dwelling, from which three families were compelled to flee through smoke and flames.

This fire started in the front entry of the three-family house, in a heap of oily rags, all but trapping Mr. and Mrs. James Blackman and eight children on the top floor. Mrs. Louise Stringer and four children fled the second floor and Mrs. Edith Lowell and six children were driven out of their first floor home.

Tax Delinquents Have 5 Days

Only five more days remain for 7000 delinquent taxpayers to save their homes, City Collector William M. McMorrow warned today.

The parcels will be sold at a tax title auction Wednesday in City Hall.

Collector McMorrow said many persons have made 25 per cent payments on their 1931 tax bills, in accordance with Mayor Curley's announcement of three weeks ago, to the effect that homes could be saved by such action.

But those parcels which already had been advertised in the City Record, were not included in such a "moratorium," he said.

JOEL McCREA SEES NEW DODGE SIX IN PRE-VIEW

Hollywood, Cal.—Joel McCrea, youthful talking picture star, whose performance in Radio Picture's feature, "Bird of Paradise," was a nationwide sensation, attended an advance showing here today of the new Dodge Six car.

"Since this great car hasn't yet made its public appearance," said the popular young actor, "I suppose I can say I was among those present when the new Dodge Six was born.

"Let me say that it's a pretty husky baby. It's about the prettiest one you've ever seen. This big new Dodge Six is a new kind of car, with a new kind of smart, sporty good looks.

"It has a personality all its own. In beauty, in comfort, in performance, in luxury, and in features, it will blaze a new trail so dazzling that others will have a hard time following."

No official details concerning the new Dodge Six car have as yet been made by the Dodge organization. It is evident, however, that the new

"Make mine Oxford Grey"

"—and go easy on the pocketbook"

It's a wise man who shoots this double-barreled order at us. And doggone if there aren't a lot of 'em! Good taste plus economy is what they want—and get! For Oxford Grey is the one color that's right any time, anywhere. And tender regard for the pocketbook has been our pet hobby ever since we started in business, 25 years ago.

Of course, there are Oxford Greys, and Oxford Greys! We are very finicky about which breed we'll accept. "Standard Testers" must put their O. K. on every yard before it goes to our own tailor-shops—an extra precaution that keeps out doubtful quality, and pays handsomely in the long run.

You'll find it most profitable to come to Bond's, and say, "Make mine Oxford Grey—and go easy on the pocketbook!"

The Dodgers are dreaming a beautiful dream, a rapturous vision of gold. Observe how they sleep with their features agleam, with a joy that is sweet to behold.

Far off in the fair land of Slumber they drift, and dream of that wonderful time when Old Uncle Santa will hand them a gift and tell them it won't cost a dime.

But poor little Taxi, deep down in the red, looks on with a countenance grim. It may be a dream to the sleepers in bed, but it's only a nightmare to him.

TH[illegible]HOUR WEEK IS ADVOCATED BY GREEN

Cin[illegible] Dec. 2 (AP)—William Green was unanimously chosen [illegible] of the American Federa[illegible] Labor for the ninth con[illegible]. Green has acknowledging [illegible] speech again reiterated his intention to use vigorous methods to gain acceptance of the federation's program for unemployment insurance and the 30-hour week.

"We must translate the militant spirit of this convention into action," he said. "We will plead for co-operation, but where we cannot get it we will use every legitimate power at our command."

Green took office in 1[illegible] after the death of Samuel Gompers.

Madrid, Dec. 2 (AP)—Amadeo Vives, composer, died of heart disease here yesterday at the age of 61. A new work by him, en[illegible] [illegible]alaman, had been billed [illegible] Friday, but the per[illegible] was postponed.

CLEVELAND COUPLE LEAD IN BRIDGE WHIST TOURNAMENT

New York, Dec. 2 (AP)—A hundred weary bridge players milling about a littered hotel ballroom at 4 o'[illegible] this morning learned that M[illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] of Cleveland had taken the lead in the national pair championship.

The Clevelanders, dark horses in the tournament so far, when the third session ended led the field of 56 twosomes with 239 points. Mrs. [illegible] Culbertson and Waldemar Von Zedtwitz and [illegible] Hal Sims and Willard S. Karn, the favorite teams, ranked fifth and [illegible] respectively. [illegible] of Newark [illegible] of New York [illegible] Samuel Fry Jr. [illegible] New York tied [illegible] and Richard Frey and Charles [illegible] of New York fourth.

The tournament, one of the features of the American Bridge League's sixth annual [illegible], will [illegible] be held tomorrow.

"I WON'T WED HER"

"My daughter says there is no reason why not except that you say you can't afford it," Gibson testified that he himself protested.

"You'll have to speak to my lawyer," the riding master returned.

[illegible] he told the lad be[illegible] that the marriage would [illegible] nothing, not even the [illegible] fee for the [illegible] to stand all costs [illegible] July that Hom[illegible] to marry [illegible] for two weeks and [illegible]

LIKE GIRL OF OLD

The Gibson family lived in a Vic[illegible] untouched by [illegible] the modern [illegible] Through [illegible] daughter's life [illegible] who [illegible] early [illegible] who [illegible] large [illegible] had [illegible] ments [illegible] automobile [illegible]

She did not go to the movies much," he said. "Hardly at all, until she went with the defendant—and then only to parties consisting of Homewood and some other members of his family.

"HE'S BENEATH NOTICE"

Do you consider Homewood beneath your social standing?" Atty. Finklestein asked.

By no means," replied the man whose name appears in the social register.

[illegible] as the courtroom murmured its surprised approval, he added:

"Of course, I consider him beneath any social notice or any other notice since what has happened, but at that time—when, I first met him—I did not."

His voice quivered with indignation and his watery hazel eyes seemed to shriek in his long, ascetic face.

Questioning Gibson closely about the horse shows the Homewood and Charlotte whom her father ca[illegible] Artie attended Gibson agreed that Homewood always paid his share of the meals.

"Aren't these horse shows in Westchester, Ct., and in New Jersey known as society events?" demanded Finklestein.

"I don't believe so," replied Gibson.

"Society people attend?"

"Oh, yes, of course."

Homewood performed the usual services of a horse trainer and jockey, the father said.

HER VICTORIAN GIRLHOOD

But immediately he dispersed this impression that Homewood was only regarded as a professional acquaintance by saying he had invited Mrs. Frank Homewood, the riding master's mother, and one of her daughters to the Gibson home. The Homewoods came to see the Gibsons' Christmas tree last year, he added.

"Did you ever invite them to have any meal at your home?" asked Finklestein.

"No," was the response.

"Do you consider the Homewoods of your social standing?"

"I never gave it any consideration," retorted Gibson.

Then Finkelstein touched on the girl's early life, her schooling, her aspiration to go on the stage, her health. Her Victorian upbringing was apparent in Gibson's replies. There were few modern novels in the house, and Charlotte often read to her mother.

Gibson, a New York attorney and local chicken fancier, has been in court each day but was not allowed to hear his daughter reveal the course of her love for Homewood.

ANGER CHOKES HIM

He also did not hear today's opening witness, Dr. Harold S. Hellar, who first informed Miss Gibson last June that she was to become a mother. Details of the "wrong" agitate the father so much he cannot speak of it without angry tears in his hazel eyes.

Gibson, a father who puts honor above all else, is the moving force behind the trial.

The charge of which Homewood is being tried before Judge George H. Taylor Jr. and a jury of 12 elderly men carries a maximum penalty of five years and a fine of $1000.

He denies being the father of the child Charlotte expects to bear before the Christmas season and side-stepped every effort Gibson made to bring him to the altar.

The aristocratic lawyer is reported to have been so outraged at Homewood's refusal that he was restrained by force from hunting the young English horseman with a gun last summer.

As court convened today it was feared that Gibson might forget all legal training and from the witness chair vent the full fury of his hatred for the accused, sitting a scant dozen paces away.

Others slated to testify were Professor Walter MacKeller, New York University English instructor, who is a close friend of both Miss Gibson and the defendant, and Dr. Harold S. Heller of Spring Valley.

Dr. Heller is the physician to whom Charlotte went last spring, fearful that her romance with the riding master had left her an expectant mother. Dr. Heller told her these fears were not unfounded.

SCREAMS DENIAL

Still another waiting to be called by the state is the defendant's cousin, Alexander G. Homewood, also a riding teacher.

Defense counsel Charles Finkelstein, while cross-examining Charlotte, attempted to prove that she had trysted with this other Homewood in Sidney's stables at Blauvelt, N. Y.

She screamed a denial. In fact, as she came to the end of her agony on the stand, she more than hinted that her love for Sidney Homewood is not yet dead.

"Look deep into your heart, Miss Gibson, and tell me if there is not left more than a mere spark of love and affection for Sidney Herbert Homewood," asked Finklestein.

The tortured girl, pierced by the eyes focused upon her, hesitated. For just the fraction of a second her glance shifted to the boy who had so often held her in his arms.

"I'd rather not answer that," she murmured.

Her father was spared the sight of her ordeal on the stand for, with other witnesses, he had been excluded from the courtroom, by order of Judge Taylor. But at every recess he has been planted by the door from the judge's chambers ready to put his arms about her and whisper words of comfort.

And on each return trip he has steadied her in the same manner. Charlotte, wearing a loose raglan coat to conceal her condition as much as possible, has been under periodical medical examination since the trial opened Monday.

District Attorney Henry V. Stebbins said he has at least a dozen more witnesses to put on the stand before the defense opens.

The last witness he will call is expected to be Miss Elizabeth Bishop, the girl from Wheaton College, Norton, Mass., who was engaged at one time to the defendant.

It was last February 29 that Homewood told Charlotte Gibson, according to her testimony, that he had terminated this troth, that it was she, Charlotte, whom he loved and that he wanted her as his wife. That next evening, according to the sub-punctuated recital which fell from Miss Gibson's lips, she first yielded to his embraces while his coupe was parked beside a cemetery.

Last June when Gibson learned that his daughter had been betrayed he immediately set about arranging for a quiet marriage. There were stormy scenes between the riding master and himself.

Dates were fixed, her testimony states, but Homewood was always too busy at his riding academy to appear and have his love for Charlotte legalized. Moreover, he contended that he was not the father of her coming child. Once Charlotte threatened to throw herself into the pond back of Homewood's riding academy.

SANTA WAITING AT PHONE

Jovial old Santa issued a special invitation today to every child in the city to call him up on the telephone in Houghton's Toyland between 6 and 9 p. m. Saturday evening. Quite suddenly this jolly old gentleman decided that reading letters and seeing his small friends wasn't enough, for he felt there must be some youngsters who couldn't get in to see him and he wants to be in touch with every one.

He is so much in demand during the day interviewing all the small visitors to Houghton's Toyland that he decided that from 6 to 9 p. m. Saturday evening was just the best time to have the youngsters call him on the phone.

Santa promises he's going to talk personally to every child who phones him. Santa's telephone number is Capitol 6611 and the time to call is 6 to 9 p. m. Saturday.

Woman Sentenced for Illegal Surgery

After being sentenced by Judge Daniel T. O'Connell in Middlesex Superior Court, East Cambridge, to an indefinite term in women's reformatory, Sherborn, for performing illegal surgery, Mrs. Blanche Y. Bowles of Summer st., Lowell, collapsed today and was carried from the courtroom.

Joseph Silva, charged with being an accessory, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to jail for six months.

Old Home Week Needed By U.S.

—By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER—

Congress has a good chance on Monday to launch an old home week.

This country needs a nice repaint job from the inside. Let's stop worrying over Manchuria, Europe and way stations.

Our trouble is that the apples have been rolling too far from the tree.

We've scattered our punches all over the world. Let's grab ourselves by the bootstraps and pull ourselves out of the gumbo.

Keep out of the woods where there are toadstools for every order of mushrooms and a wolf for every Red Riding Hood.

We have seen the League of Nations cave in like a barrel with the hoops off. They had us fixed for a first class cabin on the wreck of the Hesperus. But we missed the boat.

Let charity begin at home and don't even give it Thursday nights out.

Two Families Are Split by Gibson Girl's Honor Trial

By DOROTHY DUCAS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

New City, N. Y., Dec. 2 (INS)—Two families are divided against themselves in the trial of Sidney Herbert Homewood for the seduction of Charlotte Gibson, society girl.

The Homewoods are one group [illegible] Homewood [illegible] M[illegible] to be a mother in a few weeks. The Sayres are the other.

Alex George Homewood, [illegible] of the defendant [illegible] on Miss Gibson's [illegible] The other members of the riding master's family [illegible] to save him from [illegible] five years.

Mrs. James N[illegible] Sayre, wife of a minister who is a brother of Francis B. Sayre, son-in-law of the late President Wilson, had been called as a character witness for the English-born lad, but Violet Whitaker, her niece, has given help to the state.

The Homewood lads are not speaking. No such breach has split aunt and niece who are residents of this vicinity. Mrs. Sayre lives in Blauvelt, where the Homewood Riding Academy is located, while Miss Whitaker, who is 23, lives in Pleasantville, N. J., not far from Sidney Homewood's Park Ridge home.

There are two Homewood riding academies on the same road in Blauvelt now. One, the stable where Charlotte Gibson first met the riding master she says is the father of her unborn child, is [illegible] deserted.

The [illegible] business among the [illegible] young Homewood had built up has been shattered. Alex H[illegible] who came to this country from Padlock Wood, Eng., and [illegible] his cousin in the [illegible] opened his own academy two months ago and it is thriving. He has broken all social relations with his cousin, shocked by the circumstances revealed by Miss Gibson.

Charlotte Gibson now she has denied all the implications that she had had other affairs before she fell in love with Homewood, admitted her ignorance of the facts of life, refused to say whether or not she still cares for the young riding master, has given away to despair.

Once, long ago, she threatened suicide. The thought of her baby and her revenge kept her from attempting to take her life however.

Books---And a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

That inveterate and seasoned traveler Richard Halliburton is again with us, home, like Ulysses, from his wanderings.

He is flying now. Flying from California to New York, then taking ship to France, and flying again to Africa. His final stopping place was the Philippines.

All of his new adventures are told in a volume, "The Flying Carpet," the name of the machine in which he swept through the air. (Bobbs-Merrill.) His companion was his pilot, Moye W. Stevens, Jr., to whom the book is dedicated. They took innumerable photographs in the air and on the ground, and many of them are remarkably good.

On their very first day, flying over the Sahara Desert, they struck a sandstorm, and they were almost out of fuel. They could not turn back, there was no hope of landing, so they had to go bravely on. The whole record is full of equally exciting incidents. They were seeking romance, and they found it in its real sense in their manifold adventures everywhere.

* * *

They had flown around and over the Rock of Gilbraltar, and in a previous book Halliburton has told how he climbed to the summit of that lofty peak. Now he was above it. There seems to be nothing he will not venture to do. He and his companion swam down the Grand Canal when they reached Venice.

Halliburton tells the romantic story of Rajah Brooke an Englishman, and of his strange life in the Far East. It reads like something from the Arabian Nights. The son, Vymer, fresh from Winchester and Cambridge, was brought to Borneo, and made the Government Agent in the loneliest and most savage part of the backwoods. He learned his Rajahship from the bottom rung. He fought cholera plagues among the Dyaks; he quelled local rebellions, he learned the numerous dialects; he explored every inch of his father's territory.

At forty-three, as thoroughly prepared for his office as any king who ever ruled, he ascended the throne. And with him ascended Her Highness the Ranee Sylvia, daughter of Lord Esher.

Despite the intimate and paternal form of Sarawak's government, it is taken quite seriously in Europe. Young Englishmen are always ready to accept the Rajah's appeal to enter the service of his proud, romantic, little nation. Fully 75 English-born State officers are now scattered about the country, maintaining order and offering protection to the childlike race of jungle-dwellers who inhabit it.

Mr. Halliburton seems to have grown up swiftly since the publication, at 21, of "The Royal Road to Romance." He tells how he could not settle down to a humdrum life—he tried to do so—but had to look about to find an escape from the ordinary, everyday existence he had planned to lead. He writes better now, but he has lost none of his youthful enthusiasm. This is a long step forward for him, artistically. One wonders what he will be doing next.

Smiling tolerantly at the Victorian age, even lightly deriding it, has long been one of the favorite occupations of those who came later upon the world scene, and to say that anyone is "mid-Victorian" is to place the stamp of all that is prudishly proper upon that person.

Look into the volume edited by H. J. and Hugh Massingham, "The Great Victorians" (Doubleday, Doran), and you will pause and do a little thinking. Here is an array of the best minds of today analyzing and dissecting the best minds of a previous era which was rich in achievement and a certain stately dignity. You will find G. K. Chesterton taking up the cudgels for Dickens, saying of them that "it is rather symbolic that he died in 1870, that year of Prussian victory, which was the eclipse of Liberty throughout the world. For he had grown up with the growing Liberalism of England, and is perhaps the one great Englishman who consciously devoted himself to democracy as a feeling as well as a theory. He stands for all the hearty humanitarianism of that age at its best."

He adds that, oddly enough, Dickens could only write good rhetoric when he meant it for bad rhetoric. When he himself meant it for good rhetoric it was generally bad. So completely was the comic his spirit, almost in the sense of his soul, that anything he wrote with expansion and exaggeration was for him a liberation of the soul and took on swelling contours of the comic which really have their own beauty and even their own harmony.

Frank Swinnerton, in his excellent essay on Thackeray, calls attention to the fact, little known, that the author of "Vanity Fair" was exceedingly timid. He was not only a gentleman, says Mr. Swinnerton, he was sensitive to the point of tenderness.

And Hugh Walpole writing of Anthony Trollope, shows how, though in 1883, the year that followed his death, it seemed that he had gone, and gone forever, now, in 1932, when the reputations of the Victorian novelties are in a very sad way indeed, Trollope, who was possibly of all the more prominent writers the least expected by all his contemporaries to survive has a firmer position with serious critics than have any of them save Dickens and, possibly, Emily Bronte.

NEW THRILLS BY CHARLIE CHAN DUE ON FIVE STAR PROGRAM

Weekly Series of Sketches to Open

By N. F. T.

Adventures of the celebrated Oriental sleuth of fiction, namely Charlie Chan, claims first mention today on its' promisory merit as a "Five Star" Theater attraction tonight (WBZ) come 7:30.

* * *

DETECTIVE DOINGS

As a character the literary brain child of Earl Derr Biggers, the usual sinister cloak with which authors drape master Chinese criminals, is tossed aside in favor of modern mannerisms that make Detective Charlie Chan actually beloved. He is, as may be confirmed by anyone who has thrilled to stories from the fertile fund of imaginative situations created by Biggers, an almond eyed Sherlock Holmes. Walter Connolly, stage and screen actor of renown portrays the radio role of Charlie Chan. Listeners are to hear "The Black Camel" adventure, presented as the first in a series of weekly sketches that will occupy NBC network waves under the same sponsorship each Friday night.

* * *

TIP TOP TRIO

Those three Hub harmony gals broadcasting hereabouts regularly as the De Marco Girls, appear to be making marked progress. Next Tuesday, for example, Mary, Buddy and Ann have been booked to star during a brand new half hour musical "mike" show with Jimmy McHale's orchestra at the Cascades, atop Boston's Hotel Bradford. On the following Friday they open in person at the big Metropolitan Theater, featured for the ensuing week. All of which is good news because they're a swell trio on or off the stage and air.

* * *

Al Jolson says he's going to continue favoring listener requests for typical Jolson songs. Therefore, don't be surprised if he contributes "Sonny Boy" and "Avalon" tonight (WEEI) at 10 o'clock.

* * *

FIND FIRST TIMER

That Thursday afternoon audition brought over 200 voices before the Yankee Network microphones, each eager to be the "first timer" selected for an air debut Sunday evening (WNAC) at 8 30. It all resulted in the four studio staff judges choosing Miss Anetta Shea, of Hemenway st., a Boston Conservatory of Music student and the possessor of stellar soprano vocal chords.

* * *

Eleanor (WBZ) Talcott is also likely to have a prominent part in the new Tuesday program getting under way next week, the one mentioned above in connection with the De Marco Girls and Jimmy McHale's Cascades dance music.

* * *

A unique bit of comedy forms the basis of an offering planned at 6 o'clock (WHDH) this evening when Jim Hatfield airs the antics of "Count Up" in a new Friday program scheduled weekly on that station.

THIS EAR—THAT AIR

Backers of Rudy Vallee can count on hardly much less than a ton of fan mail after the splendid Moran and Mack comeback (WEEI) last evening—eh? Floyd Gibbons has another hotsy-totsy thriller for his followers tonight (WEEI) at 10 30, when his "Adventurers Club" congregates again . . . It was Ray Perkins who said the good old U. S. A. is now looking at the world through "ROSE-evelt colored glasses . . . Ted (CBS) Husing has in mind taking to the New York sidewalks again next week while Congress is convening in Washington. Ted will ask Gotham smiles for opinions on the Beer business. This afternoon at 2 30 a gymnasium description of Ernie Schaaf putting on finishing touches for tonight's fight comes from Fricko's training parlors in Friend st. It may be heard over New England (WNAC) with Gerry Harrison painting a word picture of preparation by Ernie. Such is to give leather pushing lovers an idea of what to expect when the Sharkey stalwart stacks up against Unknown Winston again, Monday night at the Arena, with proceeds going toward the grand old Boston American Basket Fund. Incidentally, don't miss said slugfest.

DEBTS MUST BE PAID, WRITES ROOSEVELT

New York, Dec. 2 (INS)—President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt in an article entitled "Your New National Leadership" in January Cosmopolitan Magazine discusses war debts, stock market speculation and [illegible] policies.

"Debts owed the United States," he said, "must be paid. It is sound common sense to assist your debtors in every way, but there is neither practicality nor honor in cancellation. The stabilization of world finances can best be achieved by a clear understanding of just obligations. A policy unduly favoring foreign private loans has resulted in more great sums being owed us, has failed to achieve any real international unity, economic or otherwise, and has confirmed foreign hopes for the repudiation of debts.

"The new national leadership will deal fairly, honestly, and sanely with this situation.

JAPS MAY GET U. S. REBUKE

Geneva, Dec. 2 (INS)—The story of Edward Hunter, International News Service Correspondent in Manchuria, confirming Chinese allegations of the massacre of 2700 Chinese peasants by Japanese soldiers near Fushun may compel the League assembly to condemn Japan's Manchurian campaign.

This was the opinion expressed to International News Service today by delegates from many nations to the assembly which will begin consideration of the Sino-Japanese conflict next week.

They declared the neutral testimony contained in Mr. Hunter's report of the mass killing may change the whole complexion of the impending assembly debate. Virtually every delegate here displayed keen interest in the story which aroused comment all over the world.

Bay State War Heroes in Tribute to Yankee Division Major

Maj. Edwin H. Cooper of Waban, newly elected national commander of the Army and Navy Legion of Valor, was given a testimonial dinner at the Army and Navy Club by 50 of the 98 Massachusetts members of the order in recognition of his election.

James A. Cresswell, D. S. C., was toastmaster. Among the invited guests were Lieut. George Bradley, U. S. N., of San Diego, Cal., Maj. Judson Hannigan and Maj. Arthur Atkinson.

Maj. Cooper won the D. S. C. during the World War when he was official photographer of the Yankee Division. During his service seven cameras were shot from in front of him in as many battles but he managed to secure numerous valuable pictures of enemy territory.

On one occasion he carried a wounded soldier back to the American lines under heavy fire and he once captured seven Germans when they believed he had them covered with a machine gun although it was only a motion picture camera.

Suspended 6 Months for Rum Activities

Capt. Edward W. Flynn, for 17 years a member of the Salem fire department, went under a suspension of six months today for his activities nearly three years ago with a group of Marblehead liquor law violators.

Fire Chief James S. Koen said Capt. Flynn's good record as a fireman saved him from dismissal.

WHAT WOULD YOU LIKE for Christmas?

Somebody wants to know. Somebody who loves to see you lighthearted and gay . . . who hurries home for your welcoming smile . . . the contentment your presence brings. His pockets aren't bulging this year, but he wants you to know he cares. In this case, there's a gift that stands out above others, because it means mutual happiness and, in size, it can be big or small . . . the gift of electricity.

AND PRICES — that's one of the compensations of "hard times" — so many useful and lovely things cost so little. So scribble a note to Santa, what you'd like for Christmas — and you know, by adding an appliance to your collection now and then, some day your home will be ALL ELECTRIC!

An ALL ELECTRIC home is spotless and neat . . . household activities move along smoothly, without friction or effort . . . meals taste so good . . . at nightfall, it welcomes you with warmth and light! To put it concretely, it's the toaster, percolator, vacuum cleaner, washer and ironer, refrigerator, mixer and beater, electric range and water heater, and lots of other joyful little appliances that make the ALL ELECTRIC home.

KNOW YOUR ELECTRICAL CONTRACTOR AND DEALER

Your own local electrical dealer is "electrical headquarters" for your neighborhood. He carries a complete stock of standard electrical merchandise and offers you a good variety at standard prices. If he does wiring, his work will be thorough and modern, done by skilled, licensed electricians.

YOUR DEPARTMENT STORE SELLS ELECTRICAL APPLIANCES

Many department stores in the area served by The Boston Edison Company have a modern "Electrical Department." This Department is for your convenience — that you may purchase reliable, nationally-advertised electrical merchandise where you regularly shop for clothing or household essentials. Go to the "Electrical Department" the next time you are shopping there, and see for yourself how admirably it is equipped to supply your electrical needs at fair prices — and, usually, on convenient terms.

'A MAN MUST FIGHT' :-: Former World's Champion Tells of His Battles :-: By Gene Tunney

Dempsey Bout Blocked on All Sides

SYNOPSIS

Following the collapse of a Tunney-Stribling match in Florida early in 1920 and the making of "The Fighting Marine" movie, Gene is anxiously watching the "wire pulling" designed to bring about his title bout with Dempsey in New York. Negotiations had to be practically "under cover" since the then champion was under suspension in the Empire State, Harry Wills had powerful backing as prior challenger, and Gotham's ring politicians were on the alert.

By GENE TUNNEY

During my stay in California Rickard announced that he had matched Dempsey and me. This precipitated a serious fight between Rickard and the Boxing Commission. The commission had officially and publicly warned Rickard and me of the consequences of negotiating with the "ineligible" Dempsey.

Mara, finding out that the commission's sanction for the match was a harder job than he had anticipated, and realizing what this sanction would mean to me in dollars and cents, decided while I was in California that he must have 25 per cent of any and all my earnings in the event of his having the fight in New York and I was thereby successful in winning the world's heavyweight title.

I thought this was an awful hold-up and countered with an offer of 10 per cent. He refused this. After much agitated dickering over the long-distance telephone, Gibson convinced me we had no choice but to agree to Mara's unconscionable demands.

I refused, however, to sign contracts that were sent me in which was omitted the stipulation that Mara was to receive the 25 per cent only in the event that the fight took place in New York

It is difficult for the average person to understand this custom of giving contracts to managers, agents, et cetera, for certain percentages of one's earnings. It is a curious custom and is practiced only in the boxing profession.

William A. Muldoon "has been a great figure in American sports," declares Tunney.

DERELICTS IN WAKE

Now in my opinion no professional man gives as much of himself to his profession as the pugilist. I base my opinion on a study of the ex-pugilists. What profession has left as many derelicts in its wake? A great deal of the destitution among ex-pugilists is due to cold-blooded managers, agents and split-commission men—panderers of male flesh, who are as ignoble and debased as their spiritual brethern, the traders of female beauty.

Although he had no contract to strengthen his claim, Mara later sued me for $526,000—twenty-five per cent of my gross earnings while champion. He based his suit on an alleged verbal agreement. The first moment he took the stand it was patent that Mara's memory was bad

It was amusing to find, four days after the trial opened, the husband of his aunt presiding. This was most revealing. I suppose that Tim felt that by having his uncle on the bench he would surely get justice. Well, he got just that. His uncle was entirely fair and the jury returned a verdict for me on the first ballot.

Subsequently, the Appellate Division set aside this verdict and ordered a new trial (pending at this writing) on the grounds that evidence of mine that was prejudicial was admitted

The Boxing Commission was boiling hot when I returned to New York. Rickard said, "Commissioners Farley and Brower are against Commissioner Muldoon in voting to bring the fight to New York. If Brower does not change his vote in a week, I am going to Chicago to arrange for a site there." He advised me to start training.

Commissioner William A Muldoon, who was the oldest member of the Commission and knew the boxing game inside out was anxious to have the Dempsey-Tunney match take place in New York Commissioner Brower voted with Farley to bar the match from New York on the ground that Dempsey was ineligible in the state of New York until he accepted the challenge of Harry Wills and fought him first.

Neither Rickard nor Muldoon wanted the Wills-Dempsey match Muldoon was against it because of Wills failure to meet me for the privilege of meeting Dempsey, by which he felt Wills had disqualified himself. Moreover, he was opposed to a mixed match for the heavyweight championship He remembered the after-effects of the Johnson-Jeffries fight Rickard was guided by Muldoon

Commissioner Muldoon has been a great figure in American sports He dates back four generations, and has played a leading role in each. I am indebted to Commissioner Muldoon for much advice and unswerving support throughout my career He has always been a fearless and honest arbiter of boxing, and to him and James J Walker, who wrote and had passed under his name the present law permitting boxing in the State of New York, is largely due the credit for the success that boxing has had throughout the country.

CHICAGO AFTER BOUT

I established my training camp at Tom Luther's Saratoga White Sulphur Springs Hotel, the same training camp that Sammy Kelly had shown me in 1919. Several days later Rickard left for Chicago The Chicago people were most anxious to have the fight take place there. On the eve of the signing of the contracts Commissioner Brower, listening to the protests of the various Business Men's Associations wired Rickard in Chicago that if he would again consider New York as the site for the championship fight, he would change his vote Rickard immediately dropped negotiations in Chicago and left for New York

In the meantime, Dempsey had come East and wanted the training camp in which I was established at Saratoga. Uncle Tom Luther, with an eye on the receipts, advised me that Dempsey had made previous arrangements He showed me no written evidence, however, I moved to the Adirondack camp of a Marine buddy of mine, William Osborne, at Speculator, New York

At the next meet of the Boxing Commission, Commissioners Brower and Muldoon voted to allow the Dempsey-Tunney fight for the heavyweight championship of the world to take place in New York.

At the conclusion of this meeting Chairman Farley said, "Well, I have done all I could to enforce the rulings of this commission with regard to champions accepting challenges within the stipulated period. Being outvoted in this case, I wash my hands of it."

All of us who were interested in the fight rejoiced at the decision of the Commission. Our rejoicing however, was a bit premature It was presently discovered that the License Committee, which had been so unimportant for years, was to have the final say. Col. John J. Phelan, it was learned, was chairman of this committee of two.

AL SMITH DISGUSTED

It was getting late in the summer, practically August. Hoping to stir the good Colonel into action, Rickard somehow arranged for me to visit Phelan at his camp in Peekskill, New York. It was evident to me during the visit that he was determined to delay his decision as long as possible.

He undoubtedly knew that he was going to refuse Dempsey a license and thereby prevent the match from being held in New York. It was patent that unless he made his decision without much delay, it would be too late for arrangements to be made for the fight to be held in some other city

Upon hearing my request the veteran soldier said

"Gene, I wouldn't do anything to hurt you or injure your chance in any way. We've too many mutual friends."

He named several. Reaching into his [illegible] he showed me a telegram [illegible] received from Tim Mara [illegible] to know me every [illegible] was deeply interested

"Then I can be assured that both Dempsey and I will receive licenses so that this fight can be held in New York?" I asked.

"No, no, no, I'm making no promise of that kind. I'm not going to allow this matter to bother me up here. I have my boys here to train and they come first. When we get back to New York I'll give this matter consideration, not before then," he returned

I left the camp somewhat disheartened but not altogether hopeless for there was still Tim Mara and his friendship with Governor Smith. Tim promised Gibson he would go to Albany if necessary. Mara did go to Governor Smith and let it be said to the credit of the governor that he would have nothing to do with the mess He told Mara if a repealer of the Walker boxing law came before him he would immediately sign it He was disgusted with all the [illegible].

Tunney will tell in the next chapter how Philadelphia grabbed the big match when Dempsey was refused a license in New York and how—in a talk with the champion concerning Harry Wills—Gene "caught Jack off his guard."

Shattered Romance Blamed for Suicide

New Haven Ct. Dec. 2 (AP) A shattered romance and financial worries were blamed today by police for the suicide of Loren H. Loomis 27 a Yale graduate and an employe in the university's personnel department. M. A. Keley and R. D. Reid his roommates found Loomis' body in their gas-filled apartment last night.

Loomis was graduated from Yale in 1928. Police said a 10-year romance between him and a woman whose identity was not disclosed was ended recently.

KILLS SELF; WIFE FLEES BULLETS

Providence, Dec. 2—Foiled in two attempts to kill his estranged wife Norman S. Doyle, 43, of Westminster st., killed himself today on the porch of the house where the wife was living.

Yesterday Doyle gave his son Norman, 7, who is living with his mother on Elmwood ave., a note begging Mrs. Doyle to see him.

She was on the point of acceding when the boy said

"Mother, I think Daddy has a gun."

Today Doyle went to the rear door of the house and poked a gun through the door. Mrs. Doyle fled to the street, her husband in pursuit.

She jumped behind a tree as three shots flew by. When Doyle saw a crowd gathering, he calmly walked to the porch of the house and shot himself.

To Applicants for Christmas Baskets

In order that Christmas baskets go only to deserving and needy families, it is necessary that each application be approved by either your priest, or minister, or school teacher, or mail carrier and nearby storekeeper, or police officer, or social worker, or church or charity group. If you wish to apply for a basket, therefore, get an O. K. from any one of these persons. Do not come to the Evening American office, as it is impossible to personally confer with the many thousands of applicants. Be sure to give the number in the family.

School teachers, priests, ministers, police officers, mail carriers and church and charity groups are urged to send in their lists of deserving applicants as quickly as possible. A vast amount of work is necessary to list and check applicants against duplication, and a charitable deed done quickly is twice blessed. An especial effort to reach needy families not receiving city aid is requested.

Address all names and lists, as well as contributions, to the Christmas Basket Fund, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq.

There's One Who Never Fails Needy's Plea at Christmas

Among the needy families in Greater Boston, there is one person who has never been known to spurn a plea for help.

There is one person for whom hungry children say a prayer and on whom parents ask the blessing of heaven.

It's hard to tell him on the street, because you cannot see into his heart.

He is the one to whom the desperate plea of the needy goes out this year in greater volume than ever before. His is one ear that hears the cry of the hungry and who does not turn his back.

He is the one in whom thousands of little ones have put their trust.

He is, Mr. Goodfellow, you. Or Mrs. or Miss Goodfellow—still you.

For you, who have contributed so generously in the past to the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund, here is a letter that will bring you satisfaction.

YOUR BIG CHANCE

If you are one of those who never had the opportunity of helping the unfortunate perhaps it will cause you to reflect. And perhaps it may inspire you to add your little bit to make Christmas the happiest day of the year for the needy.

The letter is from a representative of a Boston branch of the St. Vincent DePaul Society, one of the many organizations whose every endeavor is to lighten the burden of the needy. Here it is:

"We are trying to feed and clothe 80 families. Some of them have spoken to me with gratitude in their hearts for the kindness revealed to them by the Boston American last year, and who now look forward with hope that this coming Christmas will be made just as bright and happy.

"It is for them I write that they may, through your kindness, receive whatever assistance you may be able to give. It is on you that many of the needy pin their hope. I know you will not fail them."

It is to you, Mr. Goodfellow, that these poor people pour out their gratitude. It is to you they again appeal.

We know that you will not fail them.

REAL GOODFELLOWS

Two telephone girls in a Boston business office called up the Christmas Basket Editor yesterday and asked if they might provide for one of the families whose plight was told of in yesterday's papers. One will supply needed clothing. The other will see that this family gets the best Christmas dinner it ever had.

Two Goodfellows. May they never call a wrong number!

Two other women have asked to take care of another case. Remember, you can select any of the cases that are printed in this paper daily, if you prefer to help that way. If you cannot, your donation will enable the Christmas Basket Editor to do the good deed for you.

SHE SENDS CHECK

Among the contributors yesterday is another Goodfellow whose check for $10 has come each year for the past several years with the regularity of the Christmas season.

She simply enclosed her check, and while the Christmas Basket editor does not know her he can assure her that her contribution will have a ten-fold value this year.

And another who has the editor's heartiest thanks is the one who sent a dollar with an unsigned note saying:

"I wish it were ten times as much."

The latest contributors appear today in the donors' list.

CASE NO. 2

I am a patient at the Boston Sanatorium. I've been away from home for three years and in that time I lost my brother, Jan. 28, 1931, with tuberculosis, my father, June 11, 1931, with tuberculosis, and here I am with tuberculosis.

I know that my mother needs some help and I am going to ask you if you can do anything for my mother.

My mother is a cripple for the past 18 years and she can't do anything for herself. I can't do anything to help her here.

Please try and help my mother. I hope you will try.

I know she owes money to everybody, but she won't tell me because I worry.

Sometimes I just think and I get so discouraged that I feel like shooting myself.

This girl lives in South Boston. Anyone wishing to investigate this case may call the Christmas Fund Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for Case No. 2.

CASE NO. 3

My husband came home from the hospital last week after being operated on. The Welfare is giving me $9 a week. Six dollars is cash and the rest is an order for groceries. Of the six, two and a quarter goes for rent and about $3 goes for wood and coal and I have got to buy shoes for my three children.

So you can see, we really have nothing left for food. My children haven't had a glass of milk in four weeks and they are not well. If you could spare a basket for my children's sake, I would appreciate it immensely. Hoping you won't disappoint me.

This woman lives in Somerville. Anyone wishing to investigate this case may call the Christmas Fund Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for Case No. 3.

CASE NO. 5

I am writing for two old women and I hope you will help them for Christmas. Yesterday was Thanksgiving, and they did not have a thing to eat, only one loaf of bread. One of them has been a cripple for 21 years. The other lady is 74 years old. Everyone looked happy yesterday, not them, but they smiled and brushed away a tear and said someone might remember them on Christmas day. That gave me an idea. I said there is someone and that one is the Boston American. They don't forget any needy person. I hope you will remember these two poor women. Whatever they get they will be thankful for and they don't forget anything that is done for poor people. I know you will help make them happy on Christmas.

These women live in South Boston. Anyone wishing to investigate this case may call the Christmas Basket Fund Editor, Liberty 4000 and ask for Case No. 5.

CASE NO. 6

This is the first time I am writing you but I do need a basket or would not be asking for one. When my husband was working I did not have to ask as there were many a poor soul that needed one. But now I really need one.

My husband has been out of work for some time and I have four children and it is very hard for me to get by and pay my bills on the little relief I'm getting, so please do not forget to send me a Christmas basket, so it will seem like Christmas to me and the children. I have cried many times, but hope this is one time I will feel a little happy, so I am pleading again, please do not forget me and the children.

My children are all small and are just getting to understand what Christmas means. My husband is out every morning looking for a job, but it is useless. I would like to get one if I could, but I hate to leave my little ones. They need a mother's care. So please do not forget us. There is six of us in the family.

This mother lives in South Boston. Anyone wishing to investigate this case may call the Christmas Fund Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for Case No. 6.

Stage Faces Great Loss If Hampden Abandons His "Cyrano"

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

I DO HOPE that the rumor one hears that Walter Hampden is going to abandon "Cyrano" after this season is only a rumor. But I am a sucker for things of that sort, and I always have a fear that some day the story of Harry Lauder's farewell tour or the last appearance of Weber and Fields will actually turn out to be true. So I put just enough faith in the story that Mr. Hampden is done with Cyrano to utter my protest.

R. E. ROGERS

There are few "institutions" left on the American stage of today. An institution takes years to grow and nourish and become recognized. Our stage stars of today are like the flowers grown from a Hindu magician's flower pot—a seed, a sprinkle of water, a wave of the hand, a blossom — and nothing. But Walter Hampden is a hardy perennial, the major planet in the solar system of our stage and one whose orbit comes closest to us.

The Character "Makes" Him, Too

He comes nearest to those old actors whose personalities were sunk in their repertories. Their popularity and success did not depend on a few tricks and manners constantly repeated. Their success depended on a series of thoroughly worked out and carefully differentiated characterizations. They were the actors of the romantic age.

The same is true with Mr. Hampden. Put him in a business suit and give him the lines of a stock broker to speak and he simply isn't there. He doesn't exist. The weediest juvenile means as much on the stage as he. That is because there isn't any character for him to be. But give him a character, a personality that takes thinking out and bodying forth, and you will have a presence that fills the stage . . . Manson the Servant in the House, Hamlet, Cyrano, Dr. Stockmann, Caponsacchi, Richelieu —the fact that there are so few of them over a quarter century means that Mr. Hampden has achieved that desire of all actors, to repeat a character season after season until the whole country knows it.

Soon, we hope, we shall have that double part of Ruy Blas and Don Caesar de Bazen, from that old romantic favorite of Victor Hugo, which the translator of Cyrano Brian Hooker, has translated and adapted for Mr. Hampden. But even that does not mean that he should abandon Cyrano. May I urge my reasons?

During the past 20 years I have been teaching—among other things—drama. My pupils at Technology and University Extension, numbering into the thousands, have most of them read "Cyrano de Bergerac." I have no hesitation in saying that it is the one unequivocal and invariable success of the course. The play always "goes," even on the printed page. There is never any dissent about it, that here is a piece which is both impressive literature and is rattling good drama. It has everything. Of course it is "bourgeois"; it doesn't represent the Marxian view of life. But even that sad fact doesn't seem to discourage its admirers.

The Tragedy Over Shaw's Play

In the palmy days it was taken for granted that an actor who had made a great play his own should keep it as part of his repertory until he retired. One of the reasons why Richard Mansfield's fame is not greater, in retrospect, than it is, I fancy, is because he was so eager for novelty. He had to have a new and magnificent production, a sensational new character every season. Yet, curiously, one thinks of him in his earliest and most repeated success, the cardboard "Doctor Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

Cyrano is a great tax on any actor, that long, active, robust, exceptional part, which keeps him playing at top form every moment. It is also a great tax on his pocket book, with his five heavy sets, its long list of characters and extras, its general air of a Metropolitan Opera House production. If Mr. Hampden abandons it, it will be a long time before another actor will come along who will take the legitimate theater and the art of acting seriously enough to risk his all on the piece. There is always a touch of tragedy when a great production is laid away. I remember a distinct feeling of loss and sadness when the news came that Sir Johnston Forbes Robertson had retired or destroyed his magnificent production of Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra" in sorrow and anger at what he felt was Shaw's lack of patriotism in the war.

There are two people on the American stage of today who are doing what they can to keep the old theater with us, the theater of the great traditional plays and characters. Who, in addition, are trying to create permanent, flexible repertories which will have a number of plays ready to put on all the time, all of which will be tried and tested plays, which time has judged "great." Eva Le Gallienne is one. Whatever one may think of her abilities as an actress, there is no doubt that she is a manager both idealistic and successful, that rare combination. Walter Hampden is the other.

Our Too-Much "Oh, Yeah!" Complex

I wish I could give you here my sense of the value of Rostand's heroic comedy, its permanent contribution to the literature of courage and idealism, love and philosophy. There is in town this week a man who can do it so much better than I, Mr. Clayton Hamilton who has been lecturing on "Cyrano" before our schools, the most dignified and worthwhile kind of press-agenting that is being done in our theater. Tall, monumental in figure, rosy-cheeked, his head crowned with unruly white hair, Mr. Hamilton is an unforgettable figure. One of the finest of America's very small group of fine critics, long a teacher and critic and creator of drama, who speaks with ease and humor and emotion, he can bring Rostand't great piece before your eyes in a way worthy of it.

For Cyrano represents a great tradition in the theater. Lee Simonson, one of our finest scene designers, has written a bully book called "The Stage Is Set," a study of all aspects of the theater. His last chapter is called "The Playwright and the Spoken Word," in which he deals with the absence of adequately beautiful and noble dialogue on our stages. The formula of American drama, he says, is "Oh, yeah! Oh, yeah!" simply because that is the formula of American life. There is little chance to hear contemporary plays with adequate dialogue because we neither speak it ourselves nor are able to listen to it.

Our only chance, those of us who wish for the brave old words, is in the work of such people as Mr. Hampden—and he stands almost alone—in keeping such plays as "Cyrano" in the repertory. A few weeks ago we saw it minced up into an operetta, not a conspicuous success. But this is the real thing, as Rostand wrote it and became famous for it over 30 years ago. In the words of the old Latin song: He who loves it, let him love again; he who has not yet loved, let him love tomorrow!

Court Acquits 2 of 12 in 'Wire Tap' Rum Trial

Two of the 12 defendants charged with conspiracy to violate the prohibition law in the so-called wire-tapping case were freed today in federal court after Judge James A Lowell ordered a directed verdict of not guilty

Those freed are Leo Butterfield and George F Newhall

Prior to the directed verdict Asst. U S Atty. Elihu Stone moved for discharge of the two men saying no evidence was presented against them

Stone also sprung a surprise, at the conclusion of the presentation of the government's case by reference to the use of wire-tapping evidence submitted He said

STONE PRAISES JUDGE

"I wish to state that the government case as presented is based on evidence predicated chiefly on overt acts. I appreciate the high ethical motives that prompted your honor to characterize the evidence obtained by means of wire tapping as you did.

"I say 'ethical motives' advisedly, for as a matter of law, the conduct of the officers in obtaining evidence by means of wire tapping is in perfect harmony with the rule as laid down by the Supreme Court of the United States.

EVIDENCE OMITTED

"Moreover in these days what the officers did was a measure of society's self defense against the underworld Nevertheless, in the light of the court's attitude I have refrained from presenting evidence in wire tapping only insofar as it was opened up by the other side and based the government's case upon concrete acts of some of the defendants.

"I realize the purity of Your Honor's motives. They are worthy of the finest tradition of Massachusetts, the home of James Otis."

At this point Judge Lowell interrupted, saying

"You'll have me blushing"

MOVES FOR DISCHARGE

"Because of the exercise of self-restraint the government is compelled to move for the discharge of the defendants Leo Butterfield and George F. Newhall, with reference to whom no evidence was presented."

Judge Lowell then ordered the jury to return a verdict of not guilty which it did

Butterfield, who holds a responsible position with a Boston firm was alleged in the indictment to have sold denatured alcohol to Frederick K. Snow of Lynnfield alleged leader of the men now on trial. Atty. George A. Douglas counsel for Butterfield refrained from opening up wire tapping evidence so far as his client was concerned

Before the government case closed, Special Agent Walter S Smeeden was recalled to the stand and testified to wire tapping between Aug. 31 and Sept. 12, 1931 He said he identified the voice of the defendants, Snow, Sheppard and Simard, during these 'listening-in' periods.

The trial was resumed against the remaining 10 defendant

$90 Coat Stolen From Malden Home

Breaks in two homes in the same section of Malden last night were being investigated by police today At the home of Roy A. Emery, Park View ter., where entry was obtained through a cellar window an overcoat worth $90, a woman's fur coat which had been worn only twice and a .32 calibre revolver were stolen.

The thieves used a chisel to force a window in the nearby home of Walter N. Benson They stole $2 in cash and several purses

SECRET UNION 'AIMS TO AID TAXPAYERS'

Fin. Com. Head, State Employe, Talks at Two Meetings

Boston city employes under the leadership of Chairman Frank A. Goodwin of the finance commission have organized to combat salary reductions as the Boston Evening American two weeks ago exclusively predicted they would do.

Two meetings have been held, the organization has adopted the name Equal Tax League and is soliciting contributions to carry on its campaign.

These contributions are being solicited quietly and secretly in all city departments, and all persons making donations sign slips which make them members of the league

Chairman Goodwin, who is not a city but a state employe, broke his silence about the organization only after he was convinced that newspapermen had the whole story of its formation

AGAINST ECONOMY LEAGUE

Goodwin asserted that the league hoped to expand to include other large cities like Cambridge, Worcester, Springfield, Fall River and New Bedford

"It's a taxation matter," he said. 'It's a means of making these highbrows pay their just taxes. It is directed against the Economy League and all its branches, which were represented at Mayor Curley's recent meeting at City Hall."

The slips which city workers are given in exchange for contributions state:

"Owners of real estate now pay an unfair proportion of taxes. This league is organized to protect their interests and reduce their burdens by the presentation of a more equitable system of taxation.

"No tax increase at the expense of home owners and wage earners while entrenched wealth escapes its just share of the tax burden."

It was learned however, that the first meeting, attended by a few representatives of each department, was held last Saturday at the Hotel Bellevue. Word was passed around just before City Hall closed that the meeting wouldl take place.

There the speakers included Chairman Goodwin and Charles McCarty of the city auditors office The Equal Tax League was organized and a call sent out in secret for a general meeting

The latter took place last night at the headquarters of the William F Sinclair Post the city employes' American Legion organization, in Church st. About 100 were present Goodwin was again a speaker Arrangements for the collections were made and officers were chosen

HYNES IS TREASURER

The contribution slips are signed "John B. Hynes, treasurer," and Hynes is assistant city clerk. John O'Neil of the municipal bridge service is secretary. City workers said a president had not been chosen, but they understood Chairman Goodwin was to be named.

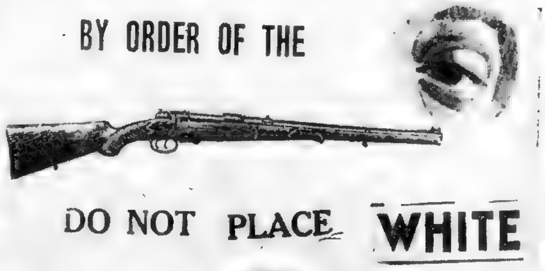
Speakers at both meetings said the aim was to combat activities of the Municipal Research Bureau, the Chamber of Commerce and all other groups asking city salary cuts

Another purpose as outlined to the assemblage last night is to compel intangible, controlled by organized wealth to bear their share of the cost of government, of which 78 per cent, now falls on real estate

"This organization will include not only city employes but veterans, organized labor and various other groups." said Goodwin today. "We hope to enlist the support of everybody who needs protection and would not think of confining it to Boston.

"Of course we need money. Those other organizations which appeared at Mayor Curley's meeting at City Hall have money. They had got together and formulated their program. But even if we don't get money, we will go ahead with our campaign and I think we will have plenty of members."

SINISTER REVERE CAMPAIGN LITERATURE



P. O. MEN PROBE REVERE THREAT

Six letters seeking to intimidate workers in the campaign of Charles H White for mayor in Revere will be turned over to Boston postal inspectors for investigation today

The letters are made up of words, phrases and pictures clipped from magazines and newspapers to express death threats

White's followers today will request Revere police to assign a guard for him. White, who does considerable traveling alone in his auto, has scoffed at the idea police protection is necessary

The letters were mailed in Boston, three being postmarked 4 p. m November 29 and the others at midnight November 30. The notes were received by Henry J. Donahue of Delano ave, Point of Pines, John J Dignan and [illegible], also residents of Point of Pines

CHARLES H. WHITE

Six threatening letters, formed with words clipped from newspapers, were received by workers in the campaign of Charles H. White for mayor of Revere. They are being turned over to postal inspectors today. Meanwhile White scoffs at his followers' request for a police guard for him. Above is one of the notes. (Staff photo.)

HE DIDN'T FIND SANTA, BUT--

A policeman assured him the good saint would visit him if he stayed at home. He is 3-year-old James Scott of Lynn, who took his tricycle and went in search of Santa Claus—only to become lost. Not so long ago he tried to walk to Saugus on the same quest, so the policeman recognized him and took him to his anxious mother. (Staff photo.)

6 HELD IN DICE GAME HOLDUP

Six men, five of whom police say participated in a dice game holdup at Andover on Nov. [illegible] were held in $2,000 each for the grand jury today by Judge Carr in Municipal Court on charges of possessing burglars' tools and revolvers

They are Fred Fisher, 27, of Shawmut ave, Samuel Kamel, 32, and Samuel B. Muderra, 3[illegible], of Rutland sq., Joseph J. Muderra, Jr., 29, of East Canton st., Richard L. Healey, 32 of Orchard rd, Arlington, and Murray Gordan of Estella st, Dorchester

Judge Carr declined jurisdiction on charges of stealing revolvers at the dice game robbery, but found probable cause on the other charges

Special Officer Arthur Tiernan testified to the arrest of all except Gordan after Tiernan and other officers had trailed two autos from East Canton st. to Rutland sq. There were seven loaded revolvers and a kit of burglar's tools in one machine and a pinch bar in the other

Gordan was arrested when he went to the Charles st. jail to visit a friend. Police say he admitted one of the autos was his but insisted it had been stolen

All except Healey were identified by George Lannon of Andover as participants in the holdup, and he said he had plenty of time to fix their faces in his memory as they lined the men against the wall and relieved them of three revolvers and $375 in cash. Lannon, who described the Andover affair, not as a dice game, but as a 'feed and a time,' identified three guns

"We were enjoying ourselves when we heard a knock at the door," testified Lannon. "One of the boys went to the door and opened it. 'A stickup,' he said, and slammed the door. The men outside then removed a screen door in the back and kicked in the inner door."

AUTOIST IS HELD UP, ROBBED

An automobile bandit beneath the West st. bridge, Dedham, early today stopped Otis Wright, of Wel[illegible] ave, Wellesley, and at gunpoint [illegible]

Wright told police he was on his way home when a man stepped from behind a parked automobile and waved a flashlight as a signal to stop. When Wright stepped from his car the bandit placed a gun against his chest and searched his pockets for the money

Wright was then ordered to get into his car and drive away.

Elks to Hold Memorial

YULE SEALS DO THIS—BUY SOME TODAY!

OLD SEE-SAW AND TOSSING BASKET BALL PROVIDE GREAT FUN

Have you made your annual purchase of Christmas seals? The Boston Tuberculosis Association needs money. If by chance you have never donated to this worthy cause, this is a good year to start. Out at the Prendergast Preventorium in Mattapan a big work is being carried on. These tots are suffering from undernourishment and pulmonary diseases. The children are taught to play games that will meet with their bodily condition.

Jilted Fiancee Let Fly With Ring When Told of Widow

Salem Dec 2—When Mary Ella Haley of Dover N H was told by William F Trainor of Swampscott that he was going to marry a widow Miss Haley took off his engagement ring, with five opals, and threw it at him she testified today in Superior Court.

Miss Haley 43 secretary in a Somersworth N H shoe factory is suing Trainor 14 years her senior for breach of promise and asks damages of $50,000. Trainor, former wealthy shoe manufacturer who is now a realty dealer married Mrs Margaret Lynch of Swampscott in February 1930.

According to Miss Haley, Trainor placed the ring on her engagement finger in 1929 and told her aunt Mrs Joseph Witham, with whom Miss Haley lives, that he was going to prepare a home because they would be married soon.

HE BROKE THE NEWS

She bought linens silverware clothing and other articles in preparation for her bridal she said and everything was all right until a night in January 1930 when they were listening to the radio in her Dover home.

"At 9 30 he shut off the radio," Miss Haley testified, "and said: 'I have something to tell you. I am going to be married.' I thought he was fooling and I said, laughingly, 'Do you mean it?' He said, 'Yes, I am going to be married to a widow.'

TELLS OF HER TEARS

"I started to cry and said: 'Why do you do this to me; you whom I believed in and trusted all the time? How can I face my friends?' All he said was: 'You're young. You can get by.' I cried terribly.

"Then he said that as long as we weren't going to be married I wouldn't need the engagement ring. I tore it off and threw it at him."

WIGGLESWORTH LEFT MILLIONS

A valuation of $3,915,422.50 was placed upon the estate of George Wigglesworth, father of Congressman Richard Wigglesworth, of Milton, according to an inventory filed in Norfolk Probate Court, today.

The inventory was filed by Ralph G Boyd, Mrs Grace Phillips and Charles B Newall appointed in 1930 to appraise the estate, most of which was in personal property.

The personal property value was placed at $3,751,325.59, while his real estate holdings were estimated to be worth $164,097. The bulk of the property consisted of stock holdings in public utility companies.

LUMBER LOTS PLAN SCORNED IN BOSTON

Business Men Not Interested in $100,000 Prize for Lot Buyers

The Newfoundland land lottery apparently went up in a puff of smoke today.

As a matter of fact it hadn't begun to approach the proportions indicated in published reports. It was merely in the theoretical stage.

While rumor had it that the land development feature had impressed Frederic C. Alderdice, premier of Newfoundland, and H. A. Winter a cabinet member, the plan was looked upon as impractical by hard headed New England business men.

The proposition in the rough was that the Newfoundland government which was reported in need of funds was to turn over 1,000,000 lots of land which were to be sold to subscribers for $1 down and $1 a month until paid for. The rate per lot was to be low, owing to the remoteness of the tract which is within the Arctic region.

$100,000 FIRST PRIZE

Purchasers were to be given stubs bearing their name and address in duplicate, and every little while these stubs were to be shaken up and the holder of the lucky one in the first drawing was supposed to receive $100,000.

Investigation in Boston today showed that the plan had been brought to the attention of Newfoundland officials but that's as far as it got. No plans had been drawn nor has there been any printing.

Col J. Hubert Hodson, a development engineer, with desk room in 509 Exchange Building, 53 State st, was said to be the father of the land plan and associates are credited with having trimmed it up with the lottery fringe as added inducement.

NOTHING DEFINITE

The office in which Hodson has desk room has printed on the door the title, "American International Engineer Associates Syndicate." A spokesman for occupants was provoked today because any mention of the plan had found its way into print. He admitted there was some proposition of the sort in the making, but said no definite steps had been taken.

Andrea Di Pietro of Belmont, identified with banking and other lines of business in Boston for years, whose name had been linked with that of Col Hodson of Somerville in the Newfoundland plan said:

"I met Col. Hodsdon in Devonshire st. recently and he told me about the Newfoundland proposition. 'He said there was money in it. He asked me if I had any money to invest or could get any of my friends to. I told him my friends didn't have any more ready money than I had.

WINS BANKERS' FAVOR

"Col. Hodsdon said he had talked the matter over with big men and bankers in New York, Chicago and Boston and that they and Newfoundland officials favored it. Hodsdon is the same engineer who came to me 10 or 12 years ago in connection with a port development plan in East Boston and wanted to buy land on which I had an option. He said a Canadian railroad was going to extend its line to East Boston.

PEACE REIGNS FOR AWHILE

Miss Beatrice LeRue, a department store milliner, who testified in Brookline Court to the battle waged between Vernon H. Moss, Jr., and his father in her apartment, where the elder Moss was a guest.

Vernon H. Moss, Jr., promised Judge Philip S. Parker that he would not molest his father until the assault charge against him is resumed Dec. 10.

SIGNS HOD WILL AFTER DEATH, SAYS LAWYER

Surprising Testimony Made in Carney Court Battle

Surprising testimony that a witness to the will of James Carney, South End hod carrier, had signed the document after Carney's death was given in Suffolk probate court where the fight over the will was resumed today.

Carney, who died last February in City Hospital with $2000 sewed in his clothes, left his entire estate, valued at $42,000 to his landlady, Mrs. Eliza J Norcross of Union Park st, South End.

Myron T Hall an attorney, called to the stand by Judge Leveroni, counsel for Carney's sister, Mrs Celia Mahan of New York and other relatives who are seeking to break the will, said:

"Last June, after I had been retained by Mrs. Norcross in this case, James T. Walsh came to me and said that he had signed Carney's will after Carney had died. When I heard this I called Mrs. Norcross, and Mrs. Joseph Raymond and Arthur Douse, who had also signed the will, and told them I would have nothing more to do with the case."

Walsh who was in court, was asked by Judge Poland if he had made any such statement, and he denied he had.

PAGE FOR WOMEN

Edited by MARGARET MATSON

GOOD SENSE is good fashion in winter sports clothes. Nothing so annoys the serious sportsman as to have the women of the party appear in things that are obviously unsuited to the sport. For women no longer stand on the hilltops and giggle; they compete with the men, and favorably, too

The intelligent sportswoman starts with woolen underwear—lightweight, to be sure, but snug. What goes over that is a matter of personal taste and the weather—a cotton or flannel shirt, one sweater, two or three, and a coat of some sort, either leather or of the material to match her trousers, or perhaps a parka . . . Her trousers are usually the Norwegian variety, loose at the knee, and of a hard twisted woolen knit, to which the snow won't cling in case she stumbles. Her scarf, if she wears one, is tucked in so that the ends won't fly in her face and momentarily blind her. If the weather is cold she wears mittens; if warm, knitted gloves. In one costume she prepares herself for all kinds of weather so that she is always comfortable.

Mlle. Hilda Sturn at St. Moritz

In the lower right corner and at the extreme top are sketches of the costumes in which Mlle. Hilda Sturn, a noted European sportswoman, appeared at St. Moritz. The outfits are conspicuous for their lack of frills. In one case she wears a tiny roll-your-own knitted cap, a woolen scarf, a checked flannel shirt, suede jacket and Norwegian ski trousers. In the other, a plain flannel shirt and the simplest of sweaters. It is in such costumes, plus the classic navy blue gabardine ski suit (sketched between them), that one sees the smartest of Americans at our own Lake Placid.

Down below is a four-piece knitted set of unusual merit. The sweater closes with a zipper to facilitate its removal on the upward climb. The mittens have long cuffs to keep the snow from sifting in at the wrist, and the cap has an ingenious little cock's comb trim that makes it more becoming without subtracting from its practicality. The scarf knots in an ascot and tucks in. Around her waist is knotted her parka—that lightweight jacket and hood arrangement that is windproof and warm—because the sweater wouldn't be warm enough at the top of the mountain.

Many people are wearing ski clothes now even for skating, as it isn't always possible to squeeze two types of winter sports clothes into the budget.

The snow will be here soon without a doubt. If you have any questions regarding winter sports clothes, we should be happy to answer them for you. Please address Margaret Matson, Women's Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, Mass.

Milady's Grooming

Important How You Apply Facial Creams

MUCH OF THE VALUE of facial creams lies in the manner in which they are applied. Carelessness in rubbing them into the skin sometimes does more harm than the cream itself can do to correct.

With your fingertips lift some of the cream from the jar. Put dabs of it on your chin, cheeks and forehead. Then with the elbow held high so that the palm of the hand is up, rub lightly: First, from the chin around the contour of the face to the temple; second, from the chin up across the cheek to the outside corner of the eye; third, from the chin up to the inside corner of the eye. Repeat this on both sides of the face, lifting lightly all the time until the cream is worked into the skin.

On the forehead the fingers are worked from the middle out, lifting and massaging whatever wrinkles might happen to be there. Then around the eyes, ever so gently, these are the most sensitive tissues of the face; over the nose—stroking down from the bridge and up toward the cheekbone, and around the mouth.

If creams are conscientiously applied in this manner, the massage itself will be of invaluable benefit.

Learn to Comb Your Hair

WITH THE NEW intricate coiffures it is necessary for us to spend some time learning—or rather relearning to comb your hair. Watch your hairdresser when he waves your hair; see in what directions he combs the hair, and the manner in which he does the ringlets. A lovely—and expensive—coiffure can be ruined in an hour or so, simply by careless and improper combing.

Make Feet Comfortable

THERE'S NO PEACE in the soul nor can life be glamorous when toes twinge like sin and the soles of the feet smolder like a guilty conscience. Give them a chance to carry on in comfort by changing shoes two or three times a day, if possible, by wearing stockings of more than ample size and by bathing the feet in warm water to which a teaspoonful of baking soda has been added. Thin hosiery is more likely to make for foot ease than those of heavy silk. Shoes that are designed to conform to the contour of the foot, supplying strong support for the instep, will cure the majority of foot ills, many of which are caused by pressure or friction.

A REAL QUEEN OF HEARTS

If Cecile Sorel Could But Teach the Rest of Her Sex Her Secrets of Charm!

By MARGUERITE MOOERS MARSHALL

IF ONLY A SUPREMELY beautiful and fascinating woman, a real queen of hearts, could teach the rest of her sex how she does it! There—some are unregenerate enough to think—would be a "higher education" really worth while for girls!

These reflections occurred to us with fresh force when we read in a news dispatch the other day that Cecile Sorel, supremely gifted actress of the Comedie Francaise and world-famous siren, is about to publish her memoirs.

A former President of France and a former Prime Minister of England were listed among "la divine Sorel's" adorers—who must be wondering with some apprehension whether Cecile will "tell all." But innumerable women HOPE that she will "tell all"—tell, that is to say, all about her methods for charming the male.

Secrets of Charm

While you're waiting to read the Sorel memoirs you will be interested in the secrets of charm which she gave us when we met and talked with her in New York a few years ago. This is Sorel's first and last word to the female sex:

"Women, be coquettes! Thus may you get a husband, keep a husband and—if need arises—get rid of a husband!"

Here, it would seem, is the gospel not only according to Cecile but to all her clever countrywomen. Dorothy Dunbar Bromley, analyzing in Harper's the secret of their successes with men, tell us.

"Frenchwomen have been brought up to be coquettes and they do not forget the art even after they marry . . . The Frenchwoman has enough wit and wisdom to hold her own with any husband . . . Flattery is one of her favorite methods."

It is one thoroughly approved by Cecile Sorel for, as she blandly assured us "if a woman allows a man to see that she expects great things of him that is one way of making it impossible for him to disappoint her." Here are other tenets from the Sorel code of coquetry.

"There is many a beauty who does not rule the hearts of men.

"The coquette must have brains, because she must understand herself. With every man her methods must be different.

"A man must never know just what to expect from her. She must not bore him—must, as Americans say, 'keep him guessing.'

Promise Important

"Promise is far more important that performance. A man will accomplish greater things for the promise of favors than after they are conferred. The dream of a kiss is always more beautiful than the kiss itself.

"Coquetry is even more important after marriage than before it. For it is a much more difficult job for the wife to keep her husband than for the girl to win him."

No woman, however, warns the captivating Cecile, can afford to scorn the arts of charm. Why? This is her eloquently conclusive answer:

"The true coquette is the inspiration of men. They adore her because she is the only interesting woman. And she is of value to all society because she makes of love a charming, a beautiful comedy, instead of adding it to the too long list of the world's tragedies."

Advice on Love

No Ground There for Jealousy

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going with a girl for two years. We planned to get married, but she was taken ill with T. B. and went to a sanatorium. I stuck to her through a year's sickness and have done everything I could do for her. She was discharged a little while ago from the cure, and told me she was ready to carry out her plans. But she has had a date with another boy and has asked a second one to come up and spend the afternoon with her. She tells me that she can't help it if her friends come to see her, and they always pick a time when I am around. S. J.

Dear S. J.—If the girl has been in a sanatorium for a year, don't you think it only natural that her friends—even boy friends—should call on her when she is home again? And the fact that they always come when you're there is conclusive evidence that there is no ground for jealousy, don't you think?

Various Ways of Serving Potatoes

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast over Station WAAB

WHERE THE INEXPERIENCED homemaker is likely to get into a "rut" is in the serving of potatoes. She is very likely to serve them boiled, mashed and fried, and occasionally baked if she thinks that time permits.

To save time and fuel, it is advisable most times to cook enough potatoes for at least two meals, but when this is done it is desirable to know of ways to serve the leftover potatoes, which in this case might better be termed "plannedovers." Don't forget that even baked potatoes may be utilized for a second meal. Too many times they are thrown away when really the good flavor that comes from baking them in the skins makes them even more desirable.

Savory Potatoes

Peel two large potatoes and cook in boiling salted water until tender but not soft enough to break apart. Drain and cool slightly. Dip in slightly beaten egg, then roll in dry grated cheese and dust lightly with salt and pepper. Place in a buttered pan and put in a hot oven long enough to melt the cheese and brown the potatoes lightly. If time is limited, two small potatoes may be allowed for each person instead of one large potato, but they must all be the same size.

Spanish Potatoes

1 cup cooked, cubed potatoes.
1 tbsp. butter
½ tbsp. finely chopped onion.
1 tbsp. chopped green pepper.
½ cup milk (evaporated)
¼ cup water
1 tbsp. chopped pimiento
Salt and pepper.

Wash and peel potatoes and cut into cubes and cook in boiling salted water until tender, then drain; or use leftover boiled or baked potatoes. Melt butter and add chopped onion and green pepper. Cover pan and cook over a low fire until vegetables are tender, but not browned. Add flour and mix well. Mix water with evaporated milk and add to first mixture and cook until thick, stirring constantly to prevent burning. Add chopped pimiento, salt and pepper to taste and combine with potatoes. Reheat carefully and serve. A bit of finely minced parsley may be sprinkled over the potatoes after they are in the serving dish.

Sending Card With the Present

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—When a man sends candy, flowers, or a gift and encloses his personal engraved card, is the card sent in an envelope?

2—Is it proper to write a message on the reverse side? K.

1—Yes always. Usually, it is convenient, when he leaves the card and envelope at the florist's, to write the name and address on the envelope. Then there will surely be no mix-up.

2—Yes, if you wish.

The Marry-Go-Round

Peculiar Ways of the Weaker Sex

By HELEN ROWLAND

WOMAN HAS ALWAYS been called "the weaker sex," and has enjoyed thinking of herself in that way — as something fine and delicate to be cherished—just as she enjoys thinking of herself as "cute" or "feminine" or "subtle."

Helen Rowland

* * *

But it was no great shock to her to learn that, after much research, it has been discovered that she is really "the stronger vessel," and that (according to Dr. S. J. Holmes of California) the male is "constitutionally inferior." She has long suspected it.

* * *

This explains such a lot of things. Such as why no average man is ever strong enough to pick up his Sunday newspapers, hang up his wet bath towels or find anything on the top shelf.

* * *

It explains why hanging a picture, laying a rug, opening a packing case or any irksome task just fags him all out—and why all the annoying petty details around the office must be lifted from his shoulders by some woman. Why his appointments must be remembered, his files kept, his telephone answered and his alibis put over by some willing member of the "stronger sex."

* * *

Above all, it explains his faculty amounting almost to GENIUS for dodging all the disagreeable, boring things, and always getting somebody else to "break the bad news" and do the explaining and apologizing for him.

* * *

Every woman knows how it is! Every woman has heard that strange, yet familiar, feminine voice over the telephone dozens of times.

* * *

"Mr Brown has just been called out of town. He regrets that he won't be able to get to your bridge party tomorrow."

* * *

"Mr. Smith is in conference—but says he is SO sorry he can't get the tickets for Tuesday."

* * *

"Mr. Jones will be detained at the office and won't be home for dinner."

* * *

"Mr. Green left word that your order—or your fur coat—or your new apartment—or your wrist watch won't be ready until next week."

* * *

The weaker sex! Just too weak to pick up the telephone receiver and face the music! Or the argument! The sex that "can't TAKE it" when it's going to be annoying or boring or embarrassing!

* * *

The sex that is strong enough to sit through a football game in a blizzard — but not strong enough to sit through a sermon or a highbrow recital in a steam-heated hall.

* * *

The sex that is strong enough to shoot big game, chop down trees, fight wars and walk miles around a golf course—but too weak to do its own Christmas shopping, write its own family letters or find its own things.

* * *

A man "just can't STAND" anything that he doesn't want to stand—or that he can get a woman to stand for him! Which is probably why lots of wives and stenographers (those human buffers between man and all the uncomfortable things of life) continue to hold their jobs.

Daily Bath Helps to Keep Fit

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

DURING THE summer months many thousands of persons indulge in bathing as a daily sport. As the weather becomes colder, outdoor bathing is no longer permissible. Then bathing becomes an indoor sport, but usually is not participated in as frequently as during the warm weather.

Dr. Copeland

I regard the daily bath to be almost as important for health as good food. It has many benefits. It is stimulating to the weak and relaxing to the tense. It aids the appetite, cleanses the skin and rests the tired nerves. In old times the bath was considered merely a means to cleanliness. Today, it is accepted as part of the program to maintain health and to prevent disease.

Lack of bathing permits the oil of the skin and the perspiration to accumulate on the surface. This blocks up the pores and in a measure prevents the skin from excreting poisonous substances. On the other hand, daily bathing stimulates the waste disposing function of the skin. It leaves the skin in condition to help the body rid itself of poisonous substances. Likewise, its activity leaves less work for the kidneys and lungs to do.

I am often asked whether cold showers or cold baths are beneficial. This is a question which everybody must decide for himself. If you are accustomed to bathing in cold water and feel no ill effects you may safely continue doing it. On the other hand, a cold stinging shower or bath may be detrimental when the body is not accustomed to cold water. In any event the cold bath should always be followed by a brisk rubdown. This will start the circulation and prevent chilling of the body.

The cold bath is tonic but not cleansing. For cleansing purposes the warm bath is the kind to take. This should be followed by a cold spray and vigorous rubbing with a Turkish towel.

AVOID THE DANGER OF CONSTIPATION

Delicious Cereal Overcomes This Condition Safely and Pleasantly

The first signs of constipation may be headaches, tired feelings, sallow complexions, sleeplessness, loss of appetite. If neglected, constipation may seriously impair health.

Today, you can banish constipation by simply eating a delicious cereal. Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to further aid regular habits. ALL-BRAN is also a good source of iron for the blood.

This "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is gentle in action similar to leafy vegetables. Within the body, it forms a soft mass, and gently clears out the intestinal wastes.

Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of common constipation. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Enjoy ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or use in cooking. Appetizing recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

'THREE WOMEN' ~ By Faith Baldwin

Wedding Takes Place in Spite of Illness

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Mrs. Louisa Lennox Sheldon, first of the THREE WOMEN, a wealthy New York widow, idolizes her son, Lennox, just graduated from Columbia. She planned two years in advance to marry him to some healthy, well-bred, not clever, and docile girl after she found mute evidence on his dress clothes that he had been at a studio party which included what she called "improper female companions." She arranged for Elizabeth Howland, daughter of her sister-in-law, to come to New York City and become Mrs. Sheldon's companion. The latter becomes engaged to Lennox. Elizabeth goes to see her mother in Boston. Lennox follows and a certain happening causes the date of the wedding to be set for the immediate future. Preparations are begun. Lennox is very ill.

It was a beautiful wedding, people said.

The church was well filled. It was a beautiful wedding, people said, craning their necks. A great many women cried, as women will, when Elizabeth on the arm of Diedrich Lennox paced slowly up the ribboned aisle preceded by her sister. It went off very well indeed, said the people. Louisa thought expressionless:

"There should have been a rehearsal—how very clumsy Alice is with the train."

Presently they came down the aisle having made their vows—for better—for worse, in sickness and in health. The audience with a rustling, surging sound stood to see them. Lennox, it was observed, was flushed, his eyes bright. The girl on his arm, a little eclipsed by her draperies, was as white as her veil. People saw how he put his hand over the hand on his coat sleeve and held it there.

"The darlings!" observed Mrs. Van Alstyne, a bit of lace and linen to her eyes.

Then they went back to the house. The reception was to be small.

LENNOX SMILED

He smiled at her as he got in and sat beside her there. He fingered a spray of valley lilies in her bouquet and said half shyly:

"Mine—now."

He leaned back against the plum colored upholstery and shut his eyes for a moment. The false excitement had left him. He was short of breath, there was a pain in his breast; it stabbed like a knife.

Elizabeth looked at him, cast herself upon him, smothered him in her fragrant whiteness.

"Lennox—oh, what is it?" she implored. "You're worse? You're— Tell me, dearest!"

"Don't worry—I'll be all right," he answered with an effort. He held her, and went on thoughtfully. "I'm sorry. I don't think I can go to that reception."

"You needn't," she answered him instantly. "Why should you?" Then, on a little sigh, "Lennox, I'm so frightened."

SHE KISSED HIM

At th[illegible] from heaven to lover he dal[illegible].

"Why, I've not kissed you! Not since there, in the church, with all the people watching—and that didn't count. And I mustn't kiss you——"

"You must!"

"No——"

She had her cool hands cupping his face. How good, how beneficent they felt. She was holding her little soft mouth to his feverish lips, she was kissing him. Her tears fell, cool as her hands upon his face.

"Darling—darling——"

He tightened his arms about her, exclaimed, with a gleam of triumph, "You're mine!"

"I always have been."

"Elizabeth—you don't regret?"

She knew. She cried out:

"Never—never!"

They smiled at each other a little [illegible]. They thought:

"We're married!"

But there was no amazement in the thought. They had known for so long the sense of belonging, the [illegible], the one-ness. They had reached the house. Fred Van Alstyne waited for them. As the carriage stopped, as the door was opened, he saw Elizabeth's face. He looked away; he was a reverent young man. But he never forgot.

Lennox spoke to him as he reached the sidewalk, wondering how he managed to walk at all.

HE WAS ALL IN

"Fred—I'm all in!"

Van Alstyne, a worried frown between his blonde brows, took his friend's arm. They went upstairs to his room and shut themselves in.

Elizabeth, claimed by her mother and sisters, was taken to her room to repair any damage to the wedding gown, the veiled mass of hair.

Van Alstyne left Lennox and went in search of Mrs. Sheldon.

"Lennox is pretty sick," said the young man abruptly when he had found her. "You'd best send for the doctor."

"That ill? But he was better—"

She paled slightly.

"Well, he's worse now," said Van Alstyne. [illegible] had always disliked [illegible].

"The reception?"

"Out of the question."

Louisa went to a telephone.

Ten minutes later she knocked on Elizabeth's door. The girl opened it herself; she was ready to come downstairs. The flowers were held against her breast, her face had a faint color.

SPOKE BRIEFLY

"Isn't she beautiful?" asked Ella.

[illegible] briefly.

"Lennox is ill. The doctor is on the way. You will have to go down and receive the guests. I will wait until the doctor arrives."

Elizabeth's hands opened, [illegible] flowers [illegible] on the floor.

"But I must go to him," she [illegible].

"No — go and receive your guests."

In the background Ella and the sisters were exclaiming loudly, questioning without reply.

Elizabeth pushed past Louisa.

"I will go," she cried. "What do the people matter?"

Her mother-in-law's hand fell on her arm.

"You will go downstairs," she repeated. Then she lowered her voice, spoke scarcely above a whisper but harshly. "Don't you understand? Have you no common sense? People must not know how ill he is."

NO ONE KNEW

She herself did not know. No one knew. But there must be caution, precaution.

Every last vestige of color drained from Elizabeth's face. She stood a moment, tall in the wedding gown, a white figure, turned to stone. She understood. Everything. The last implication. The final danger.

"Very well."

She went down the stairs, holding her head high, her mother and sisters whispering together following her.

The doctor came immediately. He had not been difficult to find. He had been at the church, had gone home a moment before coming on to the reception. He made his examination in the room from which even Van Alstyne had been barred.

Threatened pneumonia.

The guests talked among themselves—too bad about Lennox—such a beautiful wedding.

Louisa Sheldon and Elizabeth Sheldon stood side by side.

They could neither of them go to him, stay by him. No one must know how ill he was.

Daily True Story

Ending a Racket

IT WOULD HAVE BEEN better, far better, if they had left Tony alone. Because if what he did was far beyond the law it was the only thing he could do and continue to hold up his head.

He was in his fruit store [illegible] the best [illegible] of lemons, [illegible] bananas and other [illegible] the three [illegible] of the Fruit Store Owners Protective Association. [illegible] Tony was a good [illegible] and a growing business [illegible]

'We'll be back next week,' said one of the three as they left. "Maybe you'll decide to join up with us then."

REFUSES TO JOIN

But Tony didn't join. He couldn't see why he should pay ten [illegible] a week to men who had [illegible] his business. He didn't understand the need of [illegible] protection. He [illegible]

[illegible] And they proceeded to show him through Marie.

Marie was Tony's [illegible]. Not the most beautiful girl in the [illegible] neighborhood, but the most beautiful to Tony. That [illegible] should touch Marie.

They did. Marie was met as she came out of her home. Paint spattered her clothing and a hand smacked across her mouth. She was knocked to the sidewalk and a voice told her: "If you don't want some more tell that boy friend of yours to get wise to himself and join up with [illegible] that can take care of him."

TONY RECONSIDERS

When Marie told Tony about [illegible] he was like a man possessed. Then in an instant he cooled and took her in his arms and [illegible] "I will [illegible]. This cannot happen again." And that night he made the preparations for his "joining."

The three came in the next day. Tony was waiting for them. "Had enough?" they asked. Tony nodded and said through hard-set lips, "I will join."

The leader said, "Now you're talking sense. Sorry we had to rough up the girl friend, but she'll get over it."

The two others laughed.

Tony, speaking very slowly, said, "You wait here and I will get the money. I do not keep much money in the store because I am afraid of robbers."

He went [illegible]

Marie said, "What was that?" and Tony, answering, said, "I think they have blown up my store." Then he went out.

He got back to the store as the ambulance arrived, but there was nothing the surgeon could do. The police questioned Tony and he told them of the [illegible] and beating. The police said [illegible] about that money [illegible] like they went in there [illegible] a bomb and it went off [illegible] You were surely lucky [illegible] have been there."

Tony said, "Yes, I was lucky," and then he went back to Marie.

"There will be no more trouble," he said. "I will get a new store. I will have the money. I thought something like this might happen so I took out insurance. The company will pay me and later on I will send it back to them with interest and no name."

"But why send it back?" asked Marie.

Tony didn't answer. He never answered that question, and Marie never asked him again, not even when he had anonymously returned the insurance money because he didn't believe that a man should keep money which comes to him for blowing up his own store by setting off a bomb hidden in a pile of oranges.

Black Threat of Boxing. "Discovered" in Gotham. It's Our Mister Winston. Hop to It! Gus and Al! How Middies Signalled. More Notre Dame Stuff.

BASEBALL AND HUNTING HASH ON SIDE

DOWN IN N YAWK, they're tootin' the trumpets, crashing the cymbals and bashing the old ballyhoo drum for Unknown Winston. They've decided the giant Tampa Negro is a Madison Square Garden attraction. Even the somewhat conservative and ritzy Evening Sun scream heads and two columns a yarn on Winston offering to turn back his entire purse if he doesn't knock Max Baer colder than a land lady's cardiac. Winston has become the Dark Menace, who from earliest ring days has dogged the steps of the white champions. John L. Sullivan had his Peter Jackson, Jim Jeffries his Jack Johnson and the great Jack Dempsey his Harry Wills. Like Banquo's ghost these Black Threats never would down. And now along the fistic Rialto they are billing Unknown Winston as the Black Menace of this cauliflower era. That is good. It means that when Unknown Winston and Ernie Schaaf crawl through the ropes in the big Xmas Fund bout of the Boston Evening American, in the Arena, a week from next Monday, everything will be hootsy-tootsy and on the level. Winston will be battling for those big New York bouts, Schaaf to regain his place in the fistic sun. No chance for a "dive" or a "barney," friend fans, when two sluggers have so much at stake as the Wrentham Dynamiter and the Tampa Thunderbolt will have in the Big Biff and Bang for the Xmas Baskets. Twelve rounds for the New England Heavyweight Championship and a Wallop at The Big Dough. In this corner, Ernie Schaaf of Wrentham. Over here, Unknown Winston of Tampa. Sweet Potatoes, Mister Time Keeper, pluheese hurry up and ring that gong!

JUST TO KEEP [illegible] and [illegible] of [illegible] Boston [illegible] crawl through the ropes and take [illegible] you can [illegible] your [illegible] at the [illegible] in the [illegible] Garden [illegible] see [illegible] Gus Sonnenberg and Al M[illegible] ex-gridiron kings of Dartmouth and B. Start your wrecking and demolishing act whenever you want, brothers! On with the big Rough and Tumble.

SPEAKING OF ARMY-NAVY, did you know that when the Middies and the Cadets faced off in their first pigskin duel 'way back in 1890, when Dad smoked Cycle cigarettes and blushed when he saw a feminine ankle, that instead of using numbers the Navy quarterback called his signals in nautical terms? When the Navy quarter wanted his fullback to buck center he would bark:

"Signals—Spuns load and shift left truck!

For the flying wedge, long since barred, the Navy signal caller would chirp

"Rise, tacks and sheets, let go and overhaul the weather lifts!"

It was all Greek to the landlubbers. Why did Navy stop calling 'em that way, then? We dunno, unless opposing teams started buying nautical text books and boning on navigation.

ARMY IS GOING to be fed more Notre Dame tomorrow. Consider the Navy coaches. Head Coach "Rip" Miller starred on Notre Dame teams that twice beat the Army. Christy Flanagan, the backfield coach, was a big factor in the "perfect play," with which Notre Dame beat the Cadets in 1926. John "One Play" O'Brien, end coach, was the Notre Dame flank guardian who received the 40-yard pass from Niemec that wrecked the Army in 1928. Yes, Navy is sure to shoot Notre Dame plays at the Army tomorrow from every angle. But whether Navy and its Notre Dame plays will be successful against the Army this Saturday as Notre Dame was last week end, remains to be seen. Incidentally, it is noted that Navy is going to spend the before battle eve at the Manufacturer's Country Club, near Philadelphia. It is the same spot that Knute Rockne's last Notre Dame eleven stayed the night before they piled up 60 points on Pennsylvania on the same field the Army Navy play tomorrow.

B. U. RUNNERS OUT MONDAY

Boston University's freshmen and varsity track men will report to the Bay State track Monday afternoon for their first workout of the year under their new coach, Al Welsh.

Indications at present are that the squad will be somewhere around 100, which will be the largest turnout the Terriers have ever had in any sport.

At a meeting held yesterday 63 attended and Coach Welsh outlined his plans for the indoor and outdoor season.

M'COY NAMED HUSKY COACH

Al M[illegible] coach of Northeastern University's first freshman f[illegible] this fall, was appointed [illegible] mentor today. Dean Carl S. E[illegible] announced. McCoy will have [illegible] who aided in the coaching this season, as his assistant.

The season of 1933 will mark a big step ahead for the Huskies in intercollegiate football. The university [illegible] soccer as its [illegible] in favor of football [illegible] The first [illegible] team drew a large number of students to the squad.

It didn't take McCoy long to get started [illegible] track for his frosh eleven blanked Tufts' frosh, Huntington school, and N[illegible] [illegible] ing St Anselm's. A fine record, for a first grid edition.

Next season the Huskies have a five game card, facing St. Anselm's, Norwich, Arnold, St. Michael's and Colby. For the following year Tufts, Mass State, and Rhode Island State now are signed.

McCoy's appointment continues the policy of teacher-coaching at N. U. He is a member of the department of English.

McCoy played football at Newton High from 1913 to 1917, at quarterback and end. In '18 and '19 he played at Dean Academy, and was Penn State frosh grid captain and end in 1921. He was varsity end at Penn State in 1922, left school the following year and later transferred to Lafayette.

Guest Handicapped at 10 Goals at Polo

New York, Dec 2 (INS)—Winston F. C. Guest remains the outstanding star of indoor polo.

He is the only player rated at 10 goals in the handicap list for the new season, made public today. There are no nine-goal men and only two are rated eight—Gerard Smith, of Brooklyn and James Mills, former Yale captain.

Pitt Rose Bowl Foe of Trojan Gridmen

Los Angeles, Dec. 2 (US)—The Trojans vs. Pittsburgh on New Year's at Rose Bowl.

That's all settled. The invitation from U. S. C. was phoned to the director of athletics at Pittsburgh and he quickly accepted it after the Panther players had unanimously voted to make the trip. Which means that Michigan is out of the picture as well as Colgate and Auburn.

The announcement from the offices of Willis O. Hunter, director of athletics at U. S. C., caused quite a surprise as it was intimated that Michigan, unbeaten champions of the Big Ten and a colorful club, was in receptive mood.

COULDN'T WAIT

However the Trojan authorities pointed out that while they would [illegible] liked to invite Michigan they [illegible] not hold off their invitation until tomorrow as would have been necessary in Michigan's case, because the Big Ten meets then and would have to pass on the proposition.

"In selecting Pitt we feel that we have invited a team that has had a more representative schedule than Colgate. Pitt defeated both Notre Dame and Army. They were twice tied, but unbeaten," said Mr. Hunter. "We feel that Pitt is entitled to another crack at us because when we played them two years ago I do not believe they were at their best."

Up to the last minute it looked as though the bid would go to Ann Arbor, the lair of the Wolverine. Fielding Yost, director of Michigan athletics, was receptive, the Big Ten Conference was said to be willing to grant permission and the chariot was all oiled.

RESENT '31 ACTION

Then came a report from Chicago that Michigan was not going to get permission; that several other Big Ten schools resented Michigan's attitude inasmuch as Michigan refused to allow Northwestern to accept last year's bid when feelers from U. S. C. were sent to the Evanston team.

It put the Trojans "on the spot." An invitation to Michigan could not be extended without assurances of acceptance. Those assurances were not sufficiently weighty to satisfy Trojan officials and the Pitt Panther was selected.

Had Michigan been invited and had the Big Ten board turned them down, there would have been no substitute—and both Colgate and Pitt would have taken exception to being "second choices."

Fitchburg Brothers 1933 School Team Co-Captains

Fitchburg, Dec. 2 (INS)—Fitchburg high school athletic precedents were upset in more ways than one today.

Stanley and Felix Esielonis, brothers, right tackle and right guard on the school football team, were elected co-captains for the 1933 season.

They were the first co-captains in the history of the school, the first captains of football that do not live in the city, and the first captains to be elected at the close of the season, leaders of the various teams usually being elected in June.

Both brothers are among the standout football players of the school ranks in the State. They were mentioned on several All-Scholastic teams this year.

Kerr Disappointed, but Praises Panthers

Hamilton, N. Y., Dec. 2 (INS)—Although disappointed because Pittsburgh was chosen instead of Colgate as Southern California opponent in the Rose Bowl football classic on Jan. 2, Andy Kerr, Colgate head coach, today praised the Panthers and wished them the best of luck.

M'NAMARA, HILL IN RACE LEAD

New York, Dec. 2 (AP) The team of McNamara and Hill maintained a lead of one lap over the Hill and Grimm combination at 8 a. m. today in the six-day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden.

Two laps behind the leaders were Letourner-Debaets, Winter Groicy, Linari-Severgnio and Bingo-Georgetti.

The veteran Reggie McNamara and Hill had covered 1828 miles and nine laps. A total of 839 laps now have been stolen.

There was a 30-minute intermission this morning when McNamara skidded down an embankment after being caught in a jam. After receiving medical treatment he resumed riding.

REISS CHOSEN H. C. CAPTAIN

Worcester, Dec. 2—Charles Reiss of Baltimore has been named captain of the Holy Cross eleven for 1933.

Reiss has been a member of the Crusader varsity grid team for two years, playing at tackle in 1931 and at right end this past season. He is 22 years old, weighs 192 pounds and stands six feet. He prepared at Loyola high in Baltimore.

John V. Earls of Cincinnati was appointed varsity football manager for next year and Robert J. Woods of Flushing, N. Y., freshman manager.

Twenty-eight members of the H. C. varsity squad were awarded letters.

Eye Affliction Conquered, Fields Wins in Comeback

San Francisco, Dec. 2 (AP)—Still displaying championship style punching, Jackie Fields, welterweight titleholder, came back to the ring after a six-months' layoff, to knock out Tommy Herman, Chicago, in the second round of a 10-round non-title bout here.

Fields, whose absence from the ring was caused by an eye affliction, ended the contest with a short right to the jaw.

The first round was fast with Herman landing several rights to the jaw. Fields weighed 154 pounds and Herman 152.

Among the spectators was Young Corbett of Fresno, who is tentatively matched with Fields for a title battle here February 22.

Cadets Favored, But Middy Team Is Confident

Philadelphia, Dec. 2 (INS)—They have made the Army practically a 9-to-5 favorite, these 80,000 people who are coming roystering into town for tomorrow's organized brawl and annual hop between the Army and Navy, where football is [illegible] and shown [illegible].

It's the same Navy team that lost to Notre Dame by 12 to 0 two weeks ago. It's also the same Army team, or all that is left of it, that lost to Notre Dame by 21 to 0 one week ago and, moreover, the Middies admittedly are nobody's bus ride to South Norwalk.

So the odds don't seem right, but neither does the fact that there's hardly a Navy nickel in sight and, by this time tomorrow both situations won't matter greatly, because they're liable to be revised if not considerably altered.

By this time tomorrow, or a little later, they'll in fact stop talking about the football game and begin playing it and you can't annoy the Navy that way. The Navy always plays a better football game than it talks.

ARMY WORRIED

In fact, the word going around here between the two hostile camps, all ready for a final workout this afternoon, is that the Army board of strategy is a little unhappy about the situation. There are two factors, indeed, that give the Navy a chance. One might even say three factors. The Navy always gives itself a chance.

Another chance-giver is the Army's jaded resistance after the Notre Dame business. A third was the Army's amazing vulnerability to a pass attack in that game.

The Navy, on the basis of comparative performances, wouldn't need the deftness of Notre Dame's passing. It would only need the futility of the Army defense.

So, regardless of what the odds say, two football teams are coming up to this game tomorrow on terms of reasonable parity. One might even take a stab on the Navy and not go far wrong, if it wasn't for one restraining thought. A team that doesn't score cannot win.

MIDDIES FIGHTERS

Maybe the Middies will shoot with everything they have tomorrow and, somehow, click. They've been known to do it before.

Without going into the eligibility thing, they were far more clearly outclassed in 1927; yet it wound up 14 to 9. In 1930, they weren't supposed to have a white man's chance. But the final score was 6 to 0. Last year, they didn't figure, but the Army had to go "all out" to win by 17 to 7.

Briefly these games were all even in the line. It was only greater backfield brilliance that won for the Army and it may turn out that way again tomorrow, for the Navy's record makes it look pretty punchless. However, all football men agree that given a determined defense and a good punter, anybody is liable to stop anything.

The Navy has both.

Presndent Hoover Won't See Army-Navy Go

Philadelphia, Dec 2 (AP)—President and Mrs. Herbert Hoover today sent regrets that they could not be present tomorrow to congratulate the winner of the Army-Navy football classic and cheer the loser.

In a letter to Edward R. Bushnell, editor of a University of Pennsylvania publication, the President wrote:

"The Army-Navy football game is one of the great classics of amateur sport, and its revival as a regular annual event is gratifying to the entire country, which has long delighted in this particular national institution.

"I am indeed sorry that I cannot be present to congratulate the winner and to cheer the losing team."

WINSTON-SCHAAF TITLE GO DELAYED A WEEK

GIVES BOXERS MORE TIME TO TRAIN

By JACK CONWAY

Ernie Schaaf will defend his New England heavyweight championship against Unknown Winston at a Christmas Basket Fund boxing show at the Arena on December 12 instead of next Monday night according to an announcement made today by Matchmaker Eddie Mack of the Argonne A. A.

The title bout was postponed a week on the request of Winston. The latter wanted the extra time to get into condition on account of the fact the bout was lengthened from 10 to 12 rounds when the commission recognized it as a championship affair.

The bout was made a title affair when Jack Sharkey surrendered his New England heavyweight title to the commission and asked that Schaaf be declared best man in this class. The commission agreed to this request.

WINSTON ASKED TIME

This automatically made the bout a 12 instead of a 10-round affair. Winston felt the Schaaf camp was anxious to get him into the ring when he was not at the peak of his fighting form.

Johnny Buckley, manager of Schaaf, at first refused to consent to any postponement but later agreed to the delay of a week when Jack Sharkey told him that with an extra week he would have Schaaf better prepared for the Winston match. Sharkey has been working with Schaaf every day at the gymnasium and has been coaching the Sea Tiger on the proper punches to use in the title battle.

BETTER FIGHT CERTAIN

[illegible] week's postponement will [illegible] a better [illegible] in splendid physical condition when they [illegible] the gong.

The Argonne A. A. office reports a [illegible] $1000 in cash and $3500 in reservations. When Schaaf lost to Winston recently the show drew $12,400.

The match gives every indication of drawing between seventeen and twenty thousand dollars. The title bout has been offered at popular prices of $1, $2 and $3, which is one of the reasons it has caught on with the public.

If Winston wins he will go to England to battle Primo Carnera. A victory for Schaaf will mean a match with Stanley Poreda in the New York card and a Boston bout with Primo Carnera.

RANGERS TIE BRUINS AT TOP

While the Bruins watched the Cubs knock off the New Haven Eagles at the Boston Garden the New York Rangers took advantage of their opening and climbed into a first place tie with the Rossmen by defeating the Red Wings, 4 to 2, in Detroit.

The Red Wings put up a gallant fight against the fast traveling Blue Shirts. The teams were even at the close of the first period but the Rangers stepped out in front during the middle stanza and it was anybody's bad game until late in the final chapter when Bill Cook counted to give the Patrick crew a two-goal lead.

The spurt of the Rangers is a remarkable feat. They were in [illegible] place when they left home last Tuesday morning and now they are tied for first place after two road games.

Now they have acquired more fame for [illegible] stint to win over the Red Wings in Detroit and especially after the Jack Adams crew have had the previous home conflict.

Prior [illegible] to Rangers the Red Wings had fared against Toronto and last night was the first time in years that they have been on the losing end of two in a row at home.

In the International Division, the Montreal Maroons and the Ottawa Senators were the winners. The Maroons took the measure of their bitterest rivals, Les Canadiens, 5 to 4 in an overtime game, the first intra-city match of the season, while the Senators came from behind to beat Americans 4 to 3.

The Maroons and Ottawa are now tied for second place in the International Division and only a half game back of the Toronto Maple Leafs.

SCHAAF TOUGHENS WAIST WITH DAILY DOZEN

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

BILLY AMES OF the Garden landed a good match when he signed A. Grayson of Charlestown to meet Dick Madden of Roxbury in the eight-round semifinal to the Jim Maloney-Johnny Dixon bout at the Boston Garden on next Friday night.

Madden recently returned from a successful invasion of New York rings while Grayson has been knocking off the local opposition.

Now if somebody would match large Dan Carlo and Solly Snyder, managers of the main bout boxers, everything would be serene. Of course Daniel would have a ton or so of weight on his side but he might tire after the first minute of warfare. Personally I have to chill the opposition with the first sock or I go down from exhaustion.

Mr. Boston

I find that Dixon is quite confident. He feels that if he can slam Maloney on the latter's china chin that he may win by a knockout. Shamus always could hit but he was never at the head of the class when it came to taking a healthy sock on the button.

Even as you and I neighbor [illegible] whip to Winston in the closing rounds of his recent bout with Schaaf and [illegible] to win the home stretch to a decisive victory. McMahon thinks Winston will enter the ring against Schaaf with much more confidence than he had in his last bout. He [illegible] the [illegible] Negro [illegible] a knockout.

Look for the greatest punching duel of the year when Schaaf and Winston start tossing them. Winston will be fighting to reach the pig-skin heights. Schaaf [illegible] to keep in the big money. Such a situation always makes for a torrid mixup.

Sonny in Tight Spot

GUS SONNENBERG will have to win from Al Morelli at the Boston Garden tonight to stay in the big money. As Morelli is a comer, he is liable to put Gus on the spot.

Speaking of wrestlers, Strangler Lewis and Ray Steele will have it out at the New York Garden on next Monday night. The boys have on their shooting irons for rival wrestling groups, and are expected to make the fur fly once they get into action.

McMahon Veteran Handler

DENNIS McMAHON, who is getting Unknown Winston ready for his 12-round title bout with Ernie Schaaf, is one of the most experienced handlers of boxers in the country. At one time he was manager of Kid Kaplan who banged his way to the world's featherweight championship throne.

It was McMahon who put the

There is an absolute dearth of young big league ball players and the majors have only themselves to blame, said Hughie Duffy, Bob Quinn's chief of staff, today in the session around the hot stove at Fenway Park.

By JACK CONWAY

You will believe the football season has only started if you happen to drop in at the Boston Garden tonight where Gus Sonnenberg and Al Morelli clash in a finish wrestling bout, best two falls out of three, under the direction of Paul Bowser.

Sonnenberg and Morelli are former football heroes. Gus did his stuff at Dartmouth and at the University of Detroit, while Al gained fame and glory at Boston College.

It was Sonny who introduced the flying tackle into wrestling. His mighty plunges through space have electrified mat fans in all parts of this country and in Canada. He has drawn $3,000,000 at the box office which tops the best figures of Strangler Lewis, Stanislaus Zbyszko, Jim Londos and other [illegible] headliners.

STELLAR ATTRACTION

The old [illegible] has been a box [illegible] has given [illegible] Pub[illegible] has drew [illegible] The f[illegible] Sonny [illegible] with his [illegible] he [illegible] ated the fans.

Morelli was schooled in wrestling by the late Stanley Stasiak. Old Stack always said that Al was the most promising youngster he had seen forge to the front in the mat game. He predicted Morelli would become a champion.

Like Sonny, Morelli has used a flying tackle. He has combined this offensive weapon with an inside crotch hold, body lift and slam.

Only recently Morelli engaged in a furious 30-minute draw bout with Sonny at the Garden. He knocked the former champion through the ropes a dozen times. Yet Gus was always dangerous. One false move on Morelli's part and the match would have been over.

Strangler Lewis once told me patience is necessary if a man is to climb to the heights in the wrestling game. He said the impulsive wrestler will lose many matches which otherwise would have ended with a victory.

GUS TO SHOOT WORKS

Sonny, on the other hand, is patient as well as fiery. He is a master at pretending he is badly injured when he is only waiting for an opportunity to spring at his rival and end the bout with a vicious tackle.

The old Dynamiter has lost a lot of money during the last three years. He is out to regain his fortune and knows that victories on the mat are necessary if he is to remain a box office attraction. So you will find Gus in there shooting the works tonight. He does not wish to be wiped out by Morelli or anybody else.

The 30-minute semifinal will find Jim Browning of Missouri in action against "Buck" Weaver of Chicago.

The latest of the Masked Marvels is a [illegible] to [illegible] his bow. He will take on Jack Wagner of Providence. There will be five other prelims.

Terrier Grid Leader Gets Gold Football

For the first time in the history of Boston University, the student government of any department voted a gold football to an athlete when the school of education awarded such a prize to [illegible] "Whitey" Clem, captain of the Terrier eleven during the season just closed.

Tonight's Card

MAIN BOUT

Gus Sonnenberg, former champion, vs. Al Morelli, Boston College. (finish match, best two in three falls).

SEMI-WINDUP

M'Coy Tells of Act That Led to Prison, in Ending Life Story

By KID McCOY

As Told to Lee J. Smits

CHAPTER XL

I tried to get Theresa to relax. I brought her another drink, which she refused, so I drank it.

She wept, and put her arms about me and kissed me many times.

When I suggested that she needed rest she said, "I'm too worried to sleep. I wish I could go to sleep and never wake up!"

Perhaps with the idea of jolting her out of her mood, I said, "Maybe it would be better if I went to New York and stayed until everything is cleared up here."

"Could you leave me, Norman?" she cried, and before I realized what she intended to do, she picked up the bread knife and I seized her.

The blade was bent double with the point pressed against her breast bone. In the struggle for the knife, the handle struck her mouth, cutting her lip.

Theresa was a powerfully built woman, and I had difficulty in restraining her. As I snatched away the knife, she got hold of the gun in her left hand and held it high above us, at arm's reach over her head.

Acts Like Maniac

As I clutched for the gun there was a flash before my eyes and a heavy explosion. I shook my head, [illegible] for an instant and thinking that it was I that had been hit.

Then she slumped to the floor. She had blindly pulled the trigger, and the bullet had entered her brain. I bathed away the blood with a damp towel, kissing her and calling her name.

I felt my senses leaving me, and I reached for the whisky bottle, swilling down an enormous drink. I remember that the whisky ran down my face. Then I got my pistol and stood in front of a mirror, intending to shoot myself.

I recall that the thought entered my mind: "Moers is to blame for this. I must get him."

I had written a note saying that I was going to take my life.

I drank the rest of a quart of whisky, and the next I remember I awoke in my car, parked in the street.

What happened between then and my arrest I know only by hearsay. Although I have not the slightest recollection, the evidence shows that I behaved like a maniac.

Going to the Moers art store, I ordered the office girl to summon Moers by phone. Meanwhile I compelled those that entered the store to stand against the wall. I made the men take off their trousers, so they wouldn't run. I searched them for weapons, and took their money and valuables.

Kid Is Questioned

A man did break for the street, and I shot him in the hip, and started after him. I rushed into the store next door and repeated the performance, shooting the proprietor in the hip and shooting my own reflection in the mirror, the bullet glancing and wounding slightly the wife of the store owner.

When the police began to arrive I went outside and leaped on the running board of a car. The man at the wheel started pounding me over the head with the starting crank, and I reached for my gun which was stuck in the waistband of my trousers.

Fortunately it slipped down my leg to the running board and fell to the street. I jumped off the car, groping for my gun. A mob had formed, and I faced policemen. Someone kicked the gun out of my reach, and I was taken in charge by a swarm of officers.

>
> This is the final installment of the Life of Kid McCoy, a thrilling autobiography which has appeared daily as an exclusive feature of the Boston Evening American. The events of the Kid's life from hobo-dom to wealth, in all parts of the world, have been related. Finally he tells of his friendship for Theresa Moers and of his last meeting with her.

The first recollection I have of anything after Theresa's death, is of sitting in our apartment, being questioned by detectives. I saw a strange ring on my finger and slipped it out of sight in the upholstery.

I learned later that, on the night Theresa was shot, I called at the home of my sister and mother, and said to them, "Theresa is dead. She's been shot. I am going to kill myself," and raved on about "dying game."

All that I could answer to the thousands of questions put to me by the police and prosecutor is what I have told here. I had absolutely nothing to conceal.

But the machinery was in motion, and Kid McCoy was headed for the long bitter lesson of prison.

Theresa shot herself on Aug. 12, 1924, and on April 12, 1925, I entered San Quentin Prison.

Between those dates was purgatory too complex, too agonizing for me to attempt to chronicle. In the old county jail of Los Angeles I [illegible] full possession of mind to face the two facts that pressed upon me, each one of them in itself enough to crush me utterly.

One, that Theresa was no more. The other, that I was charged with having taken her life.

I was eager to plead guilty to what I was convinced I had done, in my violent outbreak in the Moers store, but to all efforts to persuade me to admit that I had any part in causing the death of the woman I loved I gave only one answer: I am innocent. I had told the truth in every detail.

In Prison

In jail I became judge of the kangaroo court, by means of which prisoners enforce their own discipline and keep cleanliness in the wards, or "tanks." I was perfectly confident of acquittal, in fact, never thought that I would be tried for Theresa's death.

Asa Keyes, ambitious politically, conducted a sensational prosecution of my case. A year or so later he followed me into San Quentin, himself a convict, and I am proud to say that I could shake his hand and say from the bottom of my heart that I forgave him. All bitterness had left me.

When I entered San Quentin I had but one thought—to make the most of the prison experience; to turn a tragic misfortune into a benefit.

When as a "fresh fish," head shaven, garbed in shapeless misfits, I was given the prison rule book I committed it to memory with the determination never to offend. I succeeded, and in the eight years I was in San Quentin I never forfeited the little card entitling me to all the privileges that go with perfect conduct records.

I had three sentences running one after the other—seven, seven and six years, on the shooting charges, and 10 years, concurrently with those, on the charge of manslaughter.

My maximum was 22½ years. A member of the parole board informed me that in considering my case they went on the assumption that I was not guilty on the manslaughter charge.

In prison I was shown no favors. I was first sent to the jute mill; later I became circulation manager of the prison paper, The Bulletin.

Then, when the position of fire chief was vacant I was given that highly responsible position. I made daily inspections of the prison, in [illegible] and out, removed all fire [illegible], kept the equipment in [illegible] order and was plenty busy.

As fire chief, my partner was Matt Schmidt, sentenced for life in connection with the Los Angeles Times dynamiting. Schmitty, as he was known to all in San Quentin, is a remarkable character.

He was liked by all the officials because he was efficient and industrious, and as there is no more efficient mechanical engineer anywhere, Schmitty's services are of great value to the state.

I was in constant association with this quiet, unpretentious man. The inmates respect Schmitty and his influence among them is always good. Strong, fine soul that he is, I salute him from the outside world as one whose example has helped me and hundreds of others.

Goes to Road Camp

Warden Smith, a splendid official, died after I had served four years. Warden Holohan, who succeeded him, permitted me to leave the fire department to go to the road camp at San Simeon, where every two days' work gives the convict a day of "good time" off his sentence.

I had always been a trusty after my first period of probation, and in the road camp had charge of the first aid hospital and camp sanitation.

The great lesson of self-mastery came to me in prison. I kept my mental and physical health by "living from the ears up," as Schmitty used to say.

That is, I kept my mind in control, not my emotions or appetites. I kept busy and gave my utmost energies to my job, whatever it was.

When the day came that through the activities of such friends as Gov. Fred W. Green of Michigan, United States Senator Royal S. Copeland and Harry Bennett, I was free, I was ready to re-enter the world.

When the day came that I was paroled to Harry Bennett, who never forgot the interest I took in him when he was a lightweight boxer in the United States Navy, I literally flew toward Detroit after seeing my sisters for a few hours in San Francisco.

Behind me the long twilight of prison life, back of that a fantastic career of conflict, adventure, careless living, beautiful women, boon companions.

Ahead of me one certitude: peace. I had learned that it comes from within.

Sharing my airplane ride, and sharing the room in which I now am living is Mike, a yellow canary whose cage door is always open and whose song greets me when I open my eyes to each succeeding day of work in freedom as it did in my cell in San Quentin.

(The End.)

EVERETT WEAK FOR CHARITY GO

By BILL CONNELL

School football makes its final 1932 bid for the public's fancy tomorrow afternoon at the Everett high school field, when the powerful Everett and Peabody high [illegible].

The duel is one of the finest of [illegible] of the season and the [illegible] of both cities will benefit. The crowd will be large [illegible] game is the sole school grid [illegible] of the morrow near Boston.

Everett and Peabody both have been [illegible] out each rank with [illegible] school teams. Both are [illegible] with capable backfields.

PINI HAS "FLU"

Little Joe Pini, brilliant Everett halfback, has been thrown by an attack of influenza, so isn't expected to face Peabody. Capt. Ado Commutto, high speed back of Everett, nurses an injured ankle, so he isn't likely to be of much [illegible].

There is a broken nose which sees Art Raimo, Everett end, out of the picture. Put them all together and you have a very gloomy picture for Everett.

But Coach Denny Gildea refuses to worry. The mentor will start Jo Schwerdt, remarkable forward passer, at quarterback. Gerry Johnson, light but fast halfback, and John Rosetti, fullback, are other Everett backfield dependables.

The entire Everett line is powerful. Bill Moss at center; Gene Dumas and Herb Kreuger, guards, Norman Linden and Bill Furness, tackles, and Ed Little and John Brickley at ends form a very efficient line.

Capt. Bill Cronin, Peabody center, is the individual ace of the eleven. Cronin and Moss grabbed much of the spotlight that was directed on centers this season. Thrilling will be their individual session.

GALA WINDUP

Sweeney and Anderson, two of the Peabody backs, are the boys Everett will watch tomorrow. If the home youngsters do not bottle up these two, Everett's chances will be poor.

Anyhow, a wonderful game for the schoolboys has been prepared in this Everett-Peabody clash.

It took Unknown Winston so long to come back from Florida he may fight Ernie Schaaf under the name of The Missing Link.

And that will be all right with our Ernest. He'll bring the cuffs around Monday night.

The only thing Unknown about Winston after that first bout was his whereabouts.

They even looked in the flickers for him. The story was that he was playing the lead in I'm a Fugitive from a Chain Gang of Managers.

Even if it was only going to be a heel-and-toe match Monday night, it would still be the biggest thing of its kind in Boston.

FRANK MORGAN SPURNS ROLE

Star Declines Second Lead in Film Cast

Los Angeles, Dec. 2—Psychologically and temperamentally, Frank Morgan feels he cannot do justice to the second role in "Topaze." Mr. Morgan created the role of the school teacher on the stage and made a huge success. John Barrymore plays the part on the screen for Radio.

When Mr. Morgan was approached to play the heavy in the screen version he practically agreed to accept the offer. Today he changed his mind, saying he felt it was better for all concerned.

Louella O. Parsons

The signing of Myrna Loy for the feminine lead was on again, off again, until today, when she definitely put her name on a contract. Harry D'Arrast, the director, starts production tomorrow.

"Jade" Exotic Film

The plan of Richard Haliburton to assemble his film and release it through United Artists has become a rather pretentious undertaking. Not only will Haliburton use shots of the natives and exteriors of India but there will be additional scenes to be made right here. Walter Futter, who perhaps has the greatest collection of film showing out-of-the-way places, native customs, and travel sequences, signed Mr. Haliburton for "Jade," as the picture will be called, and will produce it for United Artists release. Haliburton, who recently arrived in Hollywood, is well known as the author of "The Royal Road to Romance" and "The Glorious Adventure."

* * *

Anita Page Borrowed

Surprising how times have changed in the picture business. A year ago it would have been impossible for any independent to borrow a contract player from one of the major companies. Now it's happening every day. Anita Page, who has been in many Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions and who is still under contract to M-G-M, has been borrowed by Lou Ostrow for the feminine lead in "Jungle Pride," a coming Monogram opera. Two old timers in this business will be associated with Mr. Ostrow in the production of "Jungle Pride." Arthur Beck, husband of Leah Baird and pioneer producer, and Harry Hoyt, well known as a writer, will co-direct.

Film Who's Who

Charles Laughton, who plays the same role in "Payment Deferred," at Loew's State and Orpheum, that he did in both the London and New York stage versions of the play, is known as "the English Emil Jannings." Laughton left the career of a hotel manager behind him to serve in the World War, after which he decided to become an actor. That this decision was not a reckless one is proved by the critical acclaim which met his work in such London successes as "Liliom," "The Cherry Orchard," "The Man With Red Hair" and "Alibi." His first appearance in talkies was made in America in "Devil and the Deep."

A letter with a Chicago date line says that George Raft is packing them in at the Balaban and Katz theaters in the Windy City. On the very same program is Estelle Taylor, who is keeping the reporters busy. Miss Taylor was rumored about to remarry her ex-husband, Jack Dempsey, and she has been trailed by the scribes who have no intention of letting such a hot piece of news escape their watchful eyes. Ray Hallor, brother of Mrs. John Francis Dillon, accompanied Georgie on his tour. Speaking of being trailed, the Eastern papers printed that Charlie Chaplin married Paulette Goddard over the week-end. Both Charlie and his reported fiancee deny the rumor and I happened to see both of them at dinner Saturday night and luncheon Sunday so I have no doubt he is telling the truth.

OLD COMEDY RECIPE REVIVED

'A Good Woma--Poor Thing' Is Departure Fm the Rialto's Fare of Rcent Years

By NICHLAS YOUNG

If Dillard Long's new mmedy, "A Good Woman—Poor Thing," meets the expectatior of its sponsors, the way will be clear for a return to the stagof Charles Frohman, always described as "smart comedy." [illegible]e world premiere of this comedy is set for the Hollis on Monda. How far this new speculation in drama fare will progress iuncertain, for in subject matter it turns a cold shoulder upo the sleeky gangster and front page news, which recently hre been so potent along Amusement Lane, and returns to an ld love—a woman's heart. Times aren't the same.

• • •

As the astute Charles Washburn puts it, and he is one of the numerous associates in this venture, the author has attempted to construct a comedy that will take the spectator's mind off his [illegible] rents and the price of grapefruit. If he can succeed in that ambition loud huzzahs will be in order. In some respects the production of Mr. Long's comedy is a family affair, with Charles B Dillingham once more taking up cudgels for a better and saner drama. Mr. Dillingham's activities have lately been in mild eclipse; now he steps out again in full regalia. Some reason for this may be ascribed to the Dillingham relationship to the author. The latter is, and for a long period has been, the Dillingham secretary. [illegible] appears John Potter, [illegible] a Dillingham attache. In view of the times and their relation to the present state of the theater, it is fortunate, perhaps, that Samuel F. Nirdlinger of Philadelphia, old friend and former business associate, has joined the allied group. It is understood that Mr. Nirdlinger is providing more than [illegible] moral support.

Irene Returns

However it turns out, this becomes a bold endeavor to bring back the drama of drawingroom sophistication arranged in terms of laughs, giggles and a grain of domestic as well as dramatic, intensity. Irene Purcell, of both screen and stage, although more definitely concerned with the latter, is the "good woman—poor thing." She will be remembered as a faithful contributor to theatrical expeditions conducted by Otis Skinner, the late and beloved Mrs. Fiske, George Arliss, and as an important toiler in David Belasco's once popular "Dancing Partners." Miss Purcell's most important fling in pictures was with "The Man in Possession."

• • •

DOUBLE BARRELED GENIUS—Charles Solomon, amiable and hospitable captain of night life industry at Cocoanut Grove, mixes his talents by giving day-time admonitions to smartly-groomed employes at the Globe Theater, of which he is also head man. It is reported by those who know, that he dabbles with equal facility in food, floor shows and the flickering fillum.

Premiere Delayed

The cancellation of the Ethel Barrymore engagement in "Encore" at the Plymouth brings about a still further decline in the town's pre-holiday drama. Miss Barrymore's illness, more serious than at first supposed, has considerably upset the plans of her manager, Arthur Hopkins, who had expected to present his star on Broadway not later than Dec. 19. With Miss Barrymore ill in New Haven, Mr. Hopkins has announced that the New York opening of the new play would not take place until after Christmas.

VIGOR IN ACTING OF WARREN WILLIAM

His Dynamic Characterization Features 'The Match King' at Premiere on Two Screens

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

The movie moguls are matching their wits these days against the Fate that weaves tragic threads in real life. Hot on the heels of the highlight news comes a film paralleling the realities with the make-believe mirroring of the truth. For the so-called timely themes are in great favor at Hollywood; so in the [illegible] we now have "The Match King," [illegible] yesterday at the Uptown.

• • •

[illegible] other [illegible] the [illegible] of Warren William, a [illegible] fine performer, with never a misfire against him. [illegible] for [illegible] with a steep [illegible] of conviction from the Warren William artistry.

The [illegible] by [illegible] the patron will probably be more interested in refreshing his memory [illegible] from newspaper columns than from the book. William is a Swedish gentleman migrating to this country, and starting in as a "white wing" cleaning up the [illegible] and stooping to the gutter to pick up [illegible]. He starts his rise crookedly, by padding the payroll; then back to his [illegible] behind, the first of the many vamps in his affections.

Siren in Every Port

He [illegible] of Scandinavia, the town's name being one familiar from the match boxes, with the syllables reversed. The camera steps him up gradually into world control of [illegible] with his fingers [illegible] in every [illegible] important capital.

The [illegible] crooked streak widens and deepens, and at the end his own [illegible] finds him out, and he at last lies in the gutter a suicide.

• • •

William Is Dynamic

[illegible] The Match King [illegible] taken his work [illegible] often the picture sags, with the chief blame laid upon his shoulders. It is his great failing that he tried to make the movie biographic, which means episodic, whereas it should have been a streaming drama of action, conceived a pure motion picture, and not as a compromise with a mere narrative which it so often becomes.

But "The Match King" is fine box office, and certainly will please all admirers of Warren William.

The picture is also showing at the Paramount.

STATE ST. Hears

That despite the "scare headlines" used by some newspapers, no argument was advanced in the English note that had not already been thoroughly aired. In other words, the bad news, so-called, now bears an official stamp. The fact the arguments of the cancellationists are now out in the open should not have any special market significance. If the position of average prices is as strong as some believe, there will not be any break through the lows set early this week.

Debt Gossip

The implied threat against American goods which the English note contained is arousing some interest among the more skeptical element in the financial district. They wonder how much trade we have left with the United Kingdom after the Ottawa conference.

The same people are also likely to ask just how much good American manufacturers are likely to derive from the present drive to "Buy British." When you have already hurt trade as much as England has hers with us then it is more or less an empty gesture to threaten further reprisals.

One thing the debt note does accomplish. That is a much-needed emphasizing of the other trade outlets which this country has at stake. The first is the lost buying power of the agricultural districts. It has been estimated this stake is some 15 times greater than our record export total for one year.

This and That

One may see by some papers that the suggestion England pay in gold is ridiculed by comparing the total debt to the total world supply of gold. Of course the debt is much larger. If this argument were good why not compare our own national debt with our supply of gold.

After showing how puny our gold supply is in comparison it will be easy to suggest the government default on its bonds. Trade benefits sure to arise from lower taxation because of savings in servicing the debt would be the bait backers of such an idea might hold out to business.

The matter of governmental deficits is sometimes brought up as an added attraction by those anxious to effect cancellation. However, the domestic deficit is not mentioned. Old or not it is a fact new levies would be necessary the moment cancellation were effected. It is doubtful if they would aid business.

STOCKS LOWER IN BOSTON

Leading shares were pushed lower in late dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange today. Losses ranged from fractions to more than 2 points with rail shares leading the decline. Utilities were soft. Trading continued at a dull pace.

Atchison showed a loss of more than 2 points while New Haven slipped back slightly more than a point. Pennsylvania was down fractionally. Boston & Maine B stamped lowered more than 2 points.

American Telephone was down about 2 points from the night before. Boston Elevated eased a point and Edison Electric was down a major fraction. New England Telephone was unchanged as the list entered the final period of trading.

Eastern Steamship second preferred moved against the general trend and showed a gain of more than 2 points. Swift & Co. was firm recording a gain of a minor fraction. First National Stores converted an early gain of a fraction into a similar loss. Gillette dipped about a point.

Sees Foreign Loans as Poor Investment

This country has made a poor investment in the war debts and must sooner or later accept a sacrifice in one form or another, according to the monthly report of Fidelity Fund just published, and this is true whatever the outcome of the present negotiations.

"There are two forms of possible sacrifice," continues the report. "(1) If debts are not paid, our taxpayers must make up losses accruing to the national budget; (2) if debts are paid, we must be willing to lose several billion dollars of export business, to accept an inflow of foreign goods in spite of tariffs, and at prices at which competition is impossible."

Firestone Profit in Year $1,151,377

Akron, O. Dec 2—Net profit of $5,151,377 was earned by the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company during the year ending Oct. 31, President Harvey S. Firestone reported in his annual message to stockholders.

Net sales for the year amounted to $84,337,173, leaving an operating profit less charges of $12,[illegible]. Deductions included $5,211,893 for depreciation on plants and equipment and $1,200,100 in interest payments.

The company's cash position was reported strong, the cash items amounting to $13,167,84[illegible], with total current assets of $53,262,247.

SPECTATOR Says:

Smart people say stocks should be bought on a scale down from Wednesday's lows, that the tradition of buying stocks in December for a rise in the spring will work out again. Wall Street is going to look different after the first of the year, for there are a lot of changes in the making.

Wheat Flash

The bulge in wheat started when a prominent stock and commodities house sent out a flash to buy wheat; confirming our views that something constructive was working out in the grain situation . . . Of course the rise in sterling helped. The liquidation in wheat last month is put at 62,000,000 bushels, a lot of grain any way you look at it.

Liverpool stocks are estimated at only one-tenth of a year ago . . . Outside of other developments, the market needs two things before it can do things. One is stabilization of sterling, and the other is the lifting of pressure on U. S. Steel preferred.

Here and There

We continue to hear that Montgomery Ward is the biggest thing in the low-priced group. It's worth watching, though take it with a grain of salt until it shows something.

We are told that all these stories around about the tobacco situation, due largely to the recent weakness in American Tobacco B, should be taken with a liberal discount.

Toledo to Offer $8,000,000 Issue

Toledo, O. Dec 2—The city of Toledo will shortly offer $8,000,000 6 per cent water works and filtration plant bonds, due 1935 to 1966. A direct tax will be levied on all taxable property in Toledo from 1935 to 1966 to meet interest and principal payments on the bonds, in accordance with an ordinance passed by the City Council.

If the bonds cannot be sold at private or public sale, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation informed the authorities it would consider purchasing them, as the Lake Erie water works project will be self-liquidating.

QUIET TRADING SEES LEADERS MOVE LOWER

New York, Dec. 2—Quiet trading on the New York Stock Exchange today saw leaders sell lower, with most of yesterday's gains soon relinquished, as uncertainty continued to veil the foreign debts situation.

A reactionary tone in the British pound was uninspiring, but the session proved one of the dullest of the year, with most final price changes rather narrow.

LET MARKET DRIFT

With such economic uncertainties impending as the debt situation and other problems confronting the Congress session convening next week, the tendency, even among professional traders, was to let the market drift.

Maximum losses of around a couple of points were registered by J. I. Case and American Telephone, while Union Pacific was off about 2 in a thin market. Among issues off a point or so were U. S. Steel, Atchison, American Tobacco "B", Allied Chemical, American Can, Westinghouse Electric, United Aircraft, New York Central and a few others.

Brokerage quarters expressed the hope that some decisive action might be taken by Congress early in the session which would stimulate business and in consequence, the securities markets.

It was recalled that the tendency in the market in recent years has been downward early in December, with a New Year's recovery getting under way toward the end of the month, but the market appeared so completely sold out that bullishly inclined quarters were hopeful that a rally might get under way earlier in December than it has in the past three years. The uncertainties are so plentiful, however, that Wall Street was inclined to extreme caution.

A fresh factor appeared in international financial affairs, with the recommendation of the advisory committee of the Argentine government that negotiations be started to obtain a reduction in the service payments on the country's debt. That country's predicament is largely attributed to the extremely low prices prevailing for wheat and livestock.

BAR SILVER AT LOW

The reaction in commodity prices since early September, which has been even more severe than that of securities, has brought considerable discouragement. The movement has evidently been hastened by the weakness of the pound sterling.

Bar silver in the New York market today sagged ⅛ of a cent to 25 cents an ounce, the lowest in history. Commodity price indices now show [illegible] but a tiny fraction remains of the recovery in prices from June to September.

The weekly mercantile reviews were somewhat mixed in tenor. Dun's felt that the pre-holiday retail trade was starting under circumstances more auspicious than a year ago. Bradstreet's, however, stressed the declining tendency in a number of lines of business.

Those whose business it is to know the [illegible] of the tax laws have encountered [illegible] misunderstanding of the stock loss limitation of the 1932 revenue act. They find that many persons who have losses in securities held for more than two years are not aware of the fact that these so-called capital net losses may be deducted in full from general income, or to the extent of a credit against the tax of 12½ per cent of the net loss, whichever method results in the greater tax.

Confusion has evidently arisen from the fact that ordinary losses, i. e. losses from sale of securities held less than two years, are deducted only from corresponding gains and not from other general income. The 1928 revenue act, in effect up to this year, permitted the deduction of ordinary losses from whatever income the return disclosed. The change will naturally have the effect of tightening up the law.

Closing on Paris Bourse Is Steadier

Paris, Dec. 2 (AP)—Although trading today was still hesitant, prices on the Bourse displayed a slightly better tendency following the recent improvement in the pound sterling. Some issues including Internationals recovered fractionally and the closing was steadier.

Confidence returned on the Berlin Boerse, owing to the appointment of Gen. Von Schleicher as chancellor. Prices advanced and the closing was very strong.

Two Oils Declare Extra Dividends

Texon Oil & Land Co. declared extra dividend of 25 cents in addition to regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents, payable December 31 to stock of record December 15.

Group No. 1 Oil Co. declared an extra dividend of $200 and regular quarterly dividend of $100, payable December 31 to stock of record December 15.

California Oils in Merger Move

Los Angeles, Dec. 2—Practically unanimous approval of merger of Union Oil Associates with Union Oil of California is expected, said Secretary McPeak of Union Oil. Stockholders representing more than the necessary two-thirds of outstanding stock already have signified approval, and additional consents are being received daily.

Sterling in London Off Over 3 Cents

London, Dec. 2 (AP)—After a good opening at $3.21¼, sterling was subjected to selling pressure on the exchange market today and lost more than three cents, closing at $3.20⅝.

Cut in Terrific Tax on Home Owners Demanded

Chicago, Dec. 2 (INS)—"Cut the terrific tax burden on the small home owners so the people can buy somewhere like they used to and Chicago will turn back on the road to prosperity."

D. F. Kelly, president of the Fair, one of the largest department stores in Chicago, made this assertion in an interview in his private office today. He thinks untangling of the muddled tax situation holds the key to the business future in the second biggest city in the country.

Kelly, 63 years old, tall, slim, gray-haired, is taking an active part in helping the heads of the municipal government to solve the tax problem. He and other business men are working closely with Mayor Anton J. Cermak and other officials to effect stringent economies so that taxes can be materially slashed.

The mercantile business in Chicago, according to Kelly, one of the veterans of State Street, is coming along nicely, considering its handicaps. He said the merchants are gradually making the best of a very serious situation. He characterized himself as frankly optimistic.

"Pre-Christmas business looks promising," said Kelly. "The crowds in the stores are as great as ever although the unit of sales—due to low prices—is much smaller. We are selling more items than a year ago at this time."

TRADE OUTLOOK SEEN BRIGHTER

New York, Dec. 2 (AP)—Weekly mercantile reviews today reported seasonal movement in trade, but Dun's said December had opened under circumstances far more auspicious than were discernible at this period in 1931. Although reports to this agency contain no evidences of fresh gains, they do show a maintenance of previous levels or a decrease in the hesitancy which had been handicapping the forward movement.

"While progress generally is being aggravated by lack of support, by the uncertainties of the international debt settlements and the weakness of sterling, salient features of the week's reports include fewer adverse factors to confuse the outlook," Dun's asserted.

"There is nothing in current development to give indication of any recession in general activity being more than seasonal during the balance of the winter, while the clarification of legislative policies are being counted upon to bring a more sustained upward movement in the spring than that which carried so much encouragement during the fall months."

Bradstreet's said its reports more specifically indicate unsatisfactory or declining volume in number of important lines of business.

"Kansas City and Minneapolis, great flour centers, report mills operating at 50 to 60 per cent of capacity. Apparel industries are booking little future business and at present are suffering from a between-season lull. Lumber, building materials and hardware are below a year ago and still declining. Inquiries in the wool market have increased during the past week, but few have resulted in orders."

Form New Company to Buy G. E. Paper

Organization of the General Electric Contracts Corporation, to purchase from distributors and dealers installment payment obligations covering the sale of General Electric household appliances and other products, was announced by Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Company.

The initial operation of the new corporation will be in the New York metropolitan area and will be extended to other cities as service and volume of business requires.

More Efficiency Need in Business World

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

New York, Dec. 2—Business has reached a juncture where there should be less emphasis on retrenchment and more stress on building up gross volume of business.

The barrier to a resumption of prosperity no longer consists of relative inefficiency in business processes, but rather of high unit costs resulting from a more or less fixed overhead and a declining volume of trade. The shrinkage in gross turnover has prevented business from benefiting in profits from the substantial improvement made in the last three years in operating efficiency.

However, with much of the deadwood removed, certain well managed corporations will be able to show remarkable gains in net income when, as and if gross volume picks up.

As the new year looms, the main thought of executives should be concentrated on improving the will and the power of the people to buy ordinary consumption goods and also more durable products. Thus the hope of economic salvation, it seems to me, must be taken for a time out of the hands of the efficiency engineer and placed with advertising, selling and merchandising geniuses.

From this viewpoint, anything which diminishes the capacity of men to buy must be seriously challenged.

This does not mean of course that in individual businesses it may not be necessary to retrench further along lines which may be harmful to the general situation. The individual business man must, of course, think of his own solvency.

A number of genuinely analytical economists, though sympathetic to the demand for a reduction in wasteful public expenditures, question whether the time is opportune for indiscriminate reductions, which will further add to the vicious forces making for a decline in gross volume.

Encaustic Runs in Red Ink

New York, Dec. 2—American Encaustic Tiling Company, Lt., reports for quarter ended September 30 net loss of $193,013, after charges, depreciation, etc., against net loss of $148,603 in the preceding quarter and net loss of $74,377 in the third quarter of 1931. For nine months ended September 30 net loss was $559,177, against net loss of $312,318 in the like period of 1931.

Jobs Insurance Move Made

New York, Dec. 2—Compulsory unemployment insurance in New York State moved closer to reality when legislative committee on unemployment reconvened for a two-day session to hear final testimony of experts in January. Understood report will approve idea of compulsory unemployment insurance or mandatory unemployment reserves, and will include a draft of a recommended bill. System will probably follow Wisconsin plan.

RAYON EXPORTS HIGH RECORD

The international movement of rayon yarn during the first 10 months of the year, so far as the United States is concerned, indicates that exports from this country for the current year will establish a new high record, according to figures contained in the current issue of the Textile Organon, published by the Tubize Chatillon Corporation.

Rayon yarn exports for the 10 months ended October aggregate 538,762 pounds, or more than double the total of 227,080 for the same period last year. Imports on the other hand showed a steady decline, the total being 136,044 pounds for the current year against 1,386,937 for the same period in 1931.

Exports as well as imports, registered a sharp decline during September and October, when the domestic market for the product was most active of the year, indicating that when domestic rayon business keeps the American producers busy the export market properly becomes of secondary importance to them.

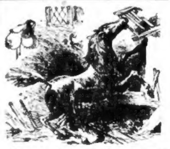
WIN THIS BEAUTIFUL SHETLAND PONY WITH SPARE CASH!



You would like to win a Shetland pony. Very well. A financial survey shown that out of every million people in America 300,000 have bought and paid for some kind of a bond. This means that the remaining 700,000 are bond salesmen. What we want to do is reduce the number of bond salesmen. And the way to do it is to have more bond buyers. Therefore, we have decided to give a Shetland pony to the person who buys the largest number of bonds between now and the time we decide to give away the pony. Is that O. K., America?

VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

The Fifth Estate!

It ranks among the oldest professions—press agentry, I mean. It goes back to the days when the snake ballyhooed the virtues of the apple of sin to Eve. A press agent par excellence was Moses, who conveyed the virtues of Jehovah to the Chosen People and was probably the author of the first real piece of written press agentry—the Ten Commandments. An exploiter who led the field in his day was Boswell, who had a certain Samuel Johnson as his chief client. Every biographer of note belongs to the class. The present-day crop has descended the scale somewhat, but among them you'll still find some interesting and naive fellows, warm-hearted chaps willing to commit a murder if their client can be credited with it in print. During the years I've been conducting this column I've received thousands of contributions from the press agents of Manhattan. Some of these have occasionally appeared here, but, of course, you never knew it because the gag or story always bore the name of some celebrity who happened to have that particular press agent on his payroll. Today I've decided to let some of the members of the Fifth Estate have their innings with full credit.

What this country really needs, observes Bing Crosby, is a good five-for-a-cent cigar. (Press Agent Jay Faggen.)

It was Vice-President Marshall who said that this country needed a good five-cent cigar. Samuel J. Feldman, who has been around some, decided that this country also needed the stimulus that moves 50,000,000 South Americans daily. That stimulus is viton yerba mate, considered by South Americans to be the very elixir of life. In fact, they point to the wonderful work it did for the army of Gen. San Martin when he was fighting for the independence of Argentina. His army lived, they say, for 18 days with nothing in their stomachs but viton yerba mate. Feldman has decided that North Americans could learn to like this drink, too, and has gone about importing huge quantities of the product. Pretty soon you'll be saying, instead of "five o'clock tea" or "midnight coffee," "I'll be seeing you over a hot slug of viton yerba mate." (Press Agent Walter M. Fleischman.)

Do you know the difference between cobalt blue and alizarin crimson? If you do, Arnold Johnson may consider you for his orchestra. Of course, you have [illegible] musician, too. In his new [illegible]le act the men in the [illegible]int the scenery right on [illegible]ge before your eyes. [illegible]bility is only one of the [illegible]ients in this versatile [illegible] Each man can play at least six instruments, warble a ditty, do a buck and wing and recite Gunga Din. (Press Agent Naomi Shaw.)

Because the program on which he is featured gave him little or no opportunity to display his talents as an entertainer, Walter [illegible], pilot of the Lucky [illegible]agic Carpet, has written [illegible]onsors requesting them [illegible] further options on his [illegible] Accordingly, he leaves [illegible] December 12 after 26 [illegible] (Press Agent George D. Lottman.)

With George White's "Music Hall Varieties" comfortably ensconced at the Casino Theater for a run of indeterminate proportions, Harry [illegible]ichman, star of the production, has been forced to defer [illegible] for a tarpon fishing [illegible] Floria coast. He [illegible]o that effect yesterday [illegible] half dozen would-[illegible]ermen who were to [illegible]nied him on the [illegible] before the White show appeared in the offing. (Press Agents Housman, Proser & Millar.)

Local gentry who indulge in the gentle pastime of big game hunting in Africa are up in arms against Carveth Wells, the explorer. Wells, in his latest African jungle picture, "Jungle Killer," now playing at the Central Theater, terms these hunters a bunch of bloodthirsty adolescents slaughtering harmless animals, and the threatened suits now aggregate a grand total equaling the war debt. Things will be popping when Wells gets back to New York next month. Don't say we didn't warn you, Carveth, old explorer. (Press Agent Galliner.)

The world's greatest concentration of elevators is now more than 85 per cent installed in the towering RCA Building of Rockefeller Center. Seventy-four elevators were originally scheduled for this mammoth structure. A seventy-fifth elevator—for freight service—was announced today. The additional car will run from the reserve boiler room, 70 feet below street level, up to the sub-basement. (The press agent keeps his identity anonymous.)

It may interest you to know that at the next girl boxing bouts slated for Roseland, December 15, Countess Jean La Mar, considered the women's boxing champion of the world, will fight for the first time in public since the war. Jean used to hang around all the fight camps years ago and pester the life out of the sports writers for a write up. Now she is high class. (Press Agent Bert Nevins.)

Don Bestor's guitarist, Billy Yates, became a pappy Saturday. (Press Agent Gene Gaudette.)

"I read it with much relish immediately," writes Charles A. Beard of "Farewell to Reform" by John Chamberlain. "It is a bit disconcerting to see one's contemporaries and one's own poor clay laid out for the funeral and bright-eyed youth in attendance, eager to get through with the services, but Mr. Chamberlain has earned by hard work the right to preside." (Press Agent Leane Zugsmith.)

You will be interested to know that the Yacht Club Boys of the Montparnesse are also appearing at the Restaurant Larue and the fun that they and the customers have is something to write home about. They have just revived an old idea, community singing, and the Astors, the Manvilles, Norma Talmadge, George Jessel, Jean Whitney Payson and whoever else happens to be around, join in the singing of once popular songs. (Press Agent Selma Robinson.)

Patent-leather shoes. Black, knife-edge creased trousers. White weskitt. Black jacket with satin lapels. Wing collar, black bow tie. Glossy black hair. That band leader, Paul Specht, who once was a starving concert violinist. (Press Agent Gannon Kearins.)

Morton Downey's favorite quotation is Bernard Shaw's, "I've never heard of two Irishmen who admired each other—and if they did they would fight about it." Mildred Bailey quotes Emerson as follows: "We are as much informed of the writer's genius by what he selects as by what he originates." (Press Agent, Sam Kopp.)

Jack Denny says that among the Broadway types he's encountered are The Playboy who promises a girl a present and gives her a past; The Pal who has the touch you'd love to skin; The Chorine who boasts that the only thing big about her is her sugar daddy's bankroll. (Press Agent, David Green.

The Music Box sponsors have decided that gay Manhattan likes to have its dancing flings on Saturday nights and accordingly has changed from its Sunday night schedules to Saturday, beginning this week. (Press Agent, Irving Stouse.)

And there you are. Just a few, picked at random. Toilers of the Fifth Estate. The press agents.

U.S. Should Not Hesitate to Ban New Loans Until the War Debts Are Paid

In a letter to the editor of the Boston Evening American, published Wednesday, William Randolph Hearst makes a contribution to the discussion of the war debts which deserves the instant attention of the country and of Congress when it convenes next week.

> "If the newly elected Congress is not only Democratic but also properly patriotic," says Mr. Hearst, "it will pass a law that no loans by American banking or other business institutions to foreign enterprises can be made without THE KNOWLEDGE AND CONSENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES, and that no loans can be made to foreign governments UNTIL THE WAR DEBTS OWED BY THOSE NATIONS TO THE WHOLE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES SHALL HAVE BEEN PAID."

This would be a sound and absolutely logical position for this country to adopt.

Furthermore, it is precisely the result which anyone with intelligence could have anticipated as the inevitable answer of the United States to the indecent, persistent, disingenuous propaganda of evasion and repudiation which this country has now for nearly fourteen years suffered at the hands of its ungrateful debtors.

And why should the United States hesitate to adopt this position?

Any creditor—and particularly one with antecedent and superior equities—has the right to protect both his claim and its priority. He has a right to follow watchfully the conduct of his debtor and to see that the latter does nothing to endanger or undermine the creditor's position. He has a right to prevent a diversion of the debtor's assets, and particularly the creation of a preference that will operate to the creditor's detriment.

When the creditor is a nation and the imperiled obligation is a public obligation owed to a people, the attempt to create a preference in favor of banking creditors is nothing short of atrocious. It deserves no better fate than complete and immediate frustration by any means which the creditor may see fit to employ and which are within his competence and right.

"Impossible," was the comment of an international banker as he recently dismissed the very thought that the war debts must be paid.

But he does NOT say this of the DEBTS OWED PRIVATELY—such as the loans made by and through the international bankers to Great Britain, for the stabilization of the pound and the protection of England's gold position.

OH, NO! That is a very different matter—clearly a horse of another color.

No self-styled "economists" or Carnegie Fund internationalists are wringing their hands about the dire consequences that will ensue if the international bankers INSIST upon PAYMENT OF THEIR PRIVATE LOANS. In fact, although such loans aggregated several hundred millions, they have in large measure already been repaid—quietly, smoothly, almost as a matter of routine.

No suggestion is ever made that any private loan should be repudiated or its payment postponed.

PRIVATE LOANS may have been required merely to tide over a crisis in exchange or for other work-a-day needs of the borrower.

The PUBLIC LOANS, on the other hand, which were made by this country may have SAVED England and her Allies FROM THREATENED DESTRUCTION and helped to keep these countries on the map of the world.

But, according to the reasoning of our bankers and their diligent and doubtless well-rewarded propagandists, the PUBLIC OBLIGATIONS of the debtor countries TO THE UNITED STATES CAN "GO HANG."

It is ONLY THE DEBTS OWED TO THE BANKERS THAT MUST BE PAID.

Such a situation lacks little of being farcical.

Can there be any surprise—sincere and honest surprise—in any quarter of the world, if the Congress of the United States should take the matter in hand, and by applying the simple remedies which it has at its command, and which Mr. Hearst calls to its attention, put an end to a situation which the American people find it increasingly hard to contemplate with patience?

How to Blow Your Nose
A Little Understood Art

The 120,000,000 men, women and children in this country who now and then have colds in their heads can avoid them by learning to blow their noses properly. This on the authority of a French scientist, who has been lecturing his own countrymen on the gentle art of using the handkerchief.

It is as simple as saying "Good morning," or "Bon jour." The main thing to remember, says our Frenchman, is that only one nostril should be blown at one time. Most people pinch the nose together, thus sending back all the microbes into the throat or the ears, where they are only too happy to remain. This is how colds begin.

So that's that. Perhaps the radio people will act on the hint and have a nose blowing drill each morning. "Right, left, right, left," etc., "sponsored by the —— —— handkerchief company."

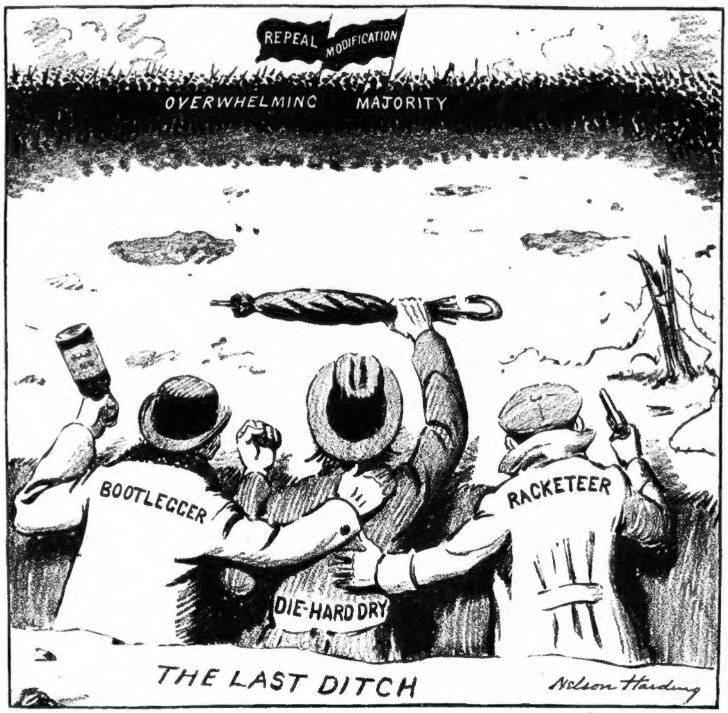
Flagging the Autoists

A man in Fall River who has occasion to traverse dark and shaded roadways at night has adopted the simple precaution of carrying a white handkerchief to mark his presence to passing autoists.

He says he has not recently had a narrow escape, much less a close shave. If people can adopt this simple expedient and save their lives, it certainly is worth it. What with handkerchiefs so cheap.

'United We Stand'

By Nelson Harding



We see an ill-assorted band
United in a final stand
Against an overwhelming tide
That closes in from every side.

Strange comrades, these who now unite
In a vindictive, last-ditch fight.
Bootlegger, Dry and Racketeer
Resist in vain; the end is near.

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, Dec. 2—Thoughts while strolling: Helen Broderick suggests a baby owl. And a waiter at Lindy's is a double for Dennis King. Helena Rubinstein and Fannie Hurst fix their hair alike. Abe Lyman's broad shoulders. Broadway's chanticleer crow has become a peep-show bark.

One word description of Sophie Tucker—booming. Who remembers when table cloths came clear to the floor? No one expresses diffidence better than Brock Pemberton. That dice gambler with a ring circling his scarf, like Ralph Barton's. Frank Sullivan, a Saratoga Springs, N. Y. boy, who made good in the city.

Martha Wilchinski is remindful of Pavlowa 25 years ago. Lady Astor leaving Scribner's. What a gal! I'm always promising to see the Keats manuscripts in the J. P. Morgan library. Ted Saucier is the town's buckitty-buckkittiest press agent. I'd rather smell pine shavings than rare perfume.

Wilfred J. Funk, sedate business man who writes girly-whirly poems. The Palace theater seems a ghost. Police Commissioner Mulrooney, plenty freckled. Something fascinating about the middle part in Amelia Earhart's teeth. Glad to see the fake investment houses deserted.

One of my favorite people—Damon Runyon. Every time I see a window washer working high up, I'm jelly inside. Morton Downey's still shrinking, for Heaven's sake! Eddie Cantor's vivid, unresting eyes. And Pauline Lord's, suggest fishpools of Heshbon. Say that, stewed—"fish pools of Heshbon!"

A predominating taste in clothes is for shepherd plaids. It always has been my secret conviction, every male wardrobe should include one of these dazzlers. Yet, tailors, here and abroad, will dampen one's ardor. Either, it is out of date or a triffle tom-tom. If you insist, you may be outfitted—but your tailor will have a wounded look.

* * *

Someone tells me Jimmy Gleason has a similar hanker for shepherd plaids, beglamouring them as "a swell set of threads." The last of the dandies to wear one, I believe, was Robert Hilliard. Between acts the other evening, I asked Earl Benham, tailor and indefatigable first nighter, the why of the tailors' aversion to such plaids. All very simple. Workmen do not like to handle it. After an hour, they are in optical dazzle, begining with sudden black spots and winding up in a whirligig of gleaming motes, like opening eyes under water.

There is shrewdness, also sudden chill, about those yes-smirking secretaries of high-powered tycoons. No wonder such ladies make $25,000 a year. Insisting I must talk to a nabob today, I exaggerated: "It's very important." A cool voice inquired: "Important to whom?" That'll make a sucker out of anyone.

I saw "Camille" for the first time, a few weeks ago, with Lillian Gish as the languorous Lilly. It also was my first view of Miss Gish before the footlights, other close-ups of the sonsy lady being encompassed at first nights as the companion of that accomplished aisle-sitter, George Jean Nathan. As a muffled lark, La Gish is tremendous, but it is those slumberous shafts, so heavy with doom, from her fluttering lids that make her unforgettable. I came away all gish-ish!

Frank McIntyre, Ann Arbor's Adonis tells of two Scotsman at a bar trying to out-maneuver, as each spit cotton, for the drinks. Finally one remarked he had just returned from an African game hunt, toppling over a bull elephant. "I plugged him right through the yures," he added "What's yures?" inquired his friend. And, like a shot, he replied: "So long as you're asking, I'll have Scotch and soda."

Listen, World
By Elsie Robinson

How Alive Are You?

ARE YOU ALIVE?

And, if so, how much?

A startling question? You've always taken it for granted that you were alive, that everyone you see is alive? But you're wrong.

Elsie Robinson

Millions of people are alive only at special times, or on special subjects. Millions are never completely born. They eat; they sleep; they move around—but they are not really alive. They are merely animated flesh and bone. They have no part, no place, in actual Life.

Only a comparatively few people in each generation really live—and no one ever succeeds in living all the time.

What does it mean "to be alive"?

IT MEANS TO BE COMPLETELY A PART OF THE PRESENT MOMENT.

Now you may not like the present moment. It may prevent pressures and problems from which you would like to escape. It may be a very dull moment, or a very dangerous one. But that doesn't matter. THAT PRESENT MOMENT IS LIFE.

It is all the life there is, at the present time.

And if you pass it up, you've passed up life.

"But how can I pass it up, unless I die?" you say.

There are a million ways of passing up life, besides physical death.

You can pass up real life by day dreaming; by building "castles in Spain"; by putting on some act which tickles your conceit, but has nothing whatever to do with your real self.

You escape from real life by living in memories—sweet memories; proud memories; sad memories; bitter memories. Lovely things, memories; but nine times out of ten they're damable dope. For any memory, no matter how noble, which takes you away from the present moment, robs you of that much life.

And you can shut out real life by burrowing into the dust of your peeves and prejudices. Countless times you've watched old folks doing that; watched them literally turning their backs on life, stubbornly clinging to some absurd notion instead of accepting the truth.

You despise old people when they do that. Yet you, yourself, do that every day. Watch yourself. Check yourself. You'll be surprised.

Passing up life; running away from life, how often we do it! Yet if someone told us that we had to die the next minute, we'd scream in terror.

Strange, how we rebel against death. And yet we spend a good share of our days in avoiding life!

Why are so many lives wrecked and frustrated? That's why. Those lives haven't really been lived. They've been spent in dreams and memories, in hopes and remorse. Hardly ever have they known the prick and pressure of the present moment. They are like the lives of the unborn.

Have you ever seen a picture of an unborn child? It is a curious little creature—that tiny lump of flesh and cartilage which is to become a man. There it lies, waiting curled upon itself, wraped in its own small knot of self-consciousness.

Millions of us, though born physically, never scramble loose from that tight knot of personal consciousness.

WE ARE WAITING TO LIVE, AND WHILE WE WAIT LIFE GOES BY US.

Are YOU waiting?

Are YOU passing real life up, for the sake of a memory, for the sake of a dream?

AND, IF YOU ARE, WHO WILL BE TO BLAME IF YOUR LIFE COMES TO NOTHING?

Just Folks

The Comedian

He set them all to laughing with his nonsense and his fun
And all of them were sorry when his foolishness was done.
For troubles that had vanished when the jester took the floor
As soon as he departed came back to mind once more.

'Tis strange what changes happen in the presence of a clown.
The heart that's sad and lonely puts all its burdens down,
The man with doubt affrighted soon forgets to be afraid
And grief and heartache vanish when a comic's on parade.

I watched him making merry. For an hour or two I'll swear
The men and women round him had forgotten every care.
The eyes of all were twinkling with the glistening light of mirth
And one swift gale of laughter swept all sorrows from the earth.

But when the jester left us and the merriment was o'er
We picked our burdens up again and murmured as before,
And some remembered losses and some their griefs retold
And some went back to sighing over hurts and heartaches old.

A Common Sense View of the Short Session
By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American

DURING THE LATE CAMPAIGN Speaker Garner was unscrupulously misrepresented and pictured as having proposed loaning money promiscuously, and without regard to security to anyone.

This was predicated upon the bill he introduced, providing the appropriation of money to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, with authority to make loans to small industries and businesses unable to secure loans at banks, but able to show that with a loan they would be able to put men to work on orders received. The reason for that was this:

Money had been given to the R. F. C. to be loaned to banks, on the theory that the banks would loan to business able to give adequate security. The banks took the money, hoarded it in their vaults, and refused to make the loans. It was the thought in Washington that the Garner plan would tend to revive confidence in the banks and result in a loosening up on credit.

To illustrate the need, at least then, of some such thing as the Garner plan, we have a letter from an industry in Brooklyn, long existing, with an unblemished reputation that about that time asked a loan of $1500 from the bank with which it had been doing business and with which it had a deposit. The loan was refused.

The head of the indusutry wrote the president of his experience, setting forth the assets of the company, a financial statement, the unblemished financial reputation of the industry, the fact that its bank had refused a loan of $1500. A secretary replied in a few lines to the effect the letter had been sent to the R. F. C. That is the last that has been heard of it.

It was to stop this sort of thing that the Garner plan was proposed, and the public may judge as to whether there was any justice in it.

* * *

The People Passed Upon It

Word comes from Washington that Speaker Garner is now assured of the two-thirds necessary for the passage of a straight repeal resolution. This should be adopted at the earliest possible moment that the machinery may be set in motion. He is certainly right in refusing to consider the plan of President Hoover which the people rejected at the polls only a month ago. There was an issue there. The people passed upon it. The present Congress, which goes out in March, was not elected on that issue, but the present Congress perfectly understands the spirit of the people. Enough Republicans have announced their acceptance of the Garner plan to supply the two-thirds necessary. More than 40 members who voted a few months ago against the Beck-Linthicum plan have changed their position as a result of the election.

It is to be hoped that Congress will accept the verdict of the people, and that no time will be lost on the plan that the people have just rejected.

* * *

Prohibition Question Out of Politics

The liberal Republicans of the House have agreed to go along with the Garner plan provided there is no reflection on their party irregularity. Of course such an agreement should be made, and has been. The prohibition question has been taken out of politics by the popular verdict. The campaign is over and the sooner it is forgotten the better. A large portion of the Republicans opposing prohibition have really favored straight repeal all along. The exigencies of party politics aside, the Republican National convention would have taken the position assumed by the Democrats in theirs. Having been voted down under pressure in their convention these Republicans maintained their party regularity during the campaign. There their obligation ends.

There should not be a mention of party politics in the proceedings now on foot. And certainly no jeers at Republicans in Congress who may have shifted their position in compliance with the mandate of the nation.

* * *

The People Spoke in Thunderous Tones

And the same bi-partisan co-operation should mark the passage of a bill to permit the manufacture and sale of beer for revenue and employment purposes. On that subject the people spoke in thunderous tones. It was the flat-footed position of the Democrats; the declaration of their platform without equivocation; the repeated declaration of their candidate. As the campaign progressed Republicans gave assurances that we should have a new source of revenue in a beer tax before the 4th of March. Since the election ever such staunch Republicans as Senator Watson, the floor leader in the Senate, who had taken the prohibition end in the campaign, has demanded immediate action this short session.

It is incredible, therefore, [illegible] there should be the least d[illegible] in marshaling a two-thirds [illegible] such a bill.

This may be necessary i[illegible] from Washington are to be [illegible] that President Hoover [illegible] termined to veto such a measure. Had he been re-elected this veto would have been conclusive. Members of his own party would have been loath to turn upon the dispenser of patronage who had received a new mandate from the people.

But he was refused the mandate; he is no longer the disp[illegible] patronage and his leaders[illegible] party is no longer acknow[illegible] more than a corporal's [illegible]

Under the circumstances [illegible] no reason why Republican [illegible] bers who favor this new source of revenue, so desperately needed, should not vote their convictions, and this should assure the two-thirds necessary to over-ride any possible veto. However, until the veto is before us we shall refuse to believe it possible.

* * *

What the Publi[illegible] Expects

There is no sane re[illegible] coming short session [illegible] should not mean a temporary truce to party politics. It faces some serious problems that should be solved,—and must be solved; and none of these have any necessary partisan implications. The matters in the late campaign on which the parties logically divide will not be pressed and should not be brought up. New sources of revenue must be found to meet the mounting deficit; economies must be effected, if at all possible; the foreign debt question, most probably, will be considered; and on all of these the two parties may now co-operate without stultification anywhere.

That is what the public expects.

And that is what the public has a right to demand.

If the necessary measures to meet immediate requirements can be enacted, and a special session prevented in the spring, a real service will have been rendered, to business; and the new administration will have a breathing period in which to make adequate preparations for the measures and policies to which it is pledged.

During the next three months the country can very well dispense with Democratic jubilation or Republican obstruction — there is serious non-partisan work to do.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Why is argumentation taught in the schools?

This question will be repeated and answered Monday by Earl H. Ryan, Department of Public Speaking.

YESTERDAY'S QUESTION

Can a Perfect Vacuum Be Produced?

By Dr. F. E. Null, Instructor in Physics

Modern mechanical vacuum pumps are rotary and work under oil. Most of them can readily produce a vacuum in which the pressure has been reduced to 0.01 mm. of mercury, i. e., to about 1 part in 76,000 of the original pressure (atmospheric) of the gas in the vessel before it was exhausted.

Let a mercury vapor pump be connected directly to the pump to be exhausted, and the pump's exhaust connected in turn to the intake of the rotary pump. The pressure in the vessel can then readily be further reduced to one-millionth of a mm. of mercury, or to approximately one part in 760,000,000 of its original value.

In order to obtain a still better vacuum a charcoal container is sometimes left attached to the exhausted vessel. When the charcoal is heated quantities of gas are driven off its surface, and pumped away. If the charcoal container is now immersed in liquid air, the charcoal has the property of absorbing (holding on its surface) most of the gas molecules that come in contact with it.
